Ex-Kaiser Accuses Britain of Early Enmity

Planned Annihilation Of Germany by Policy Of Encirclement, He Says

Former Emperor Claims Credit For Social Reforms in Germany and Endeavors to Show That He Put Through Beneficial Labor Laws Despite Strong Opposition.

Following is the fourth of thirty daily installments of the memoirs of William Hohenzollern, formerly Kaiser Wilhelm II, of the former German empire. The entire series is copyrighted for The Atlanta Constitution by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, entered at Stationer's Hall, London. (Former Kaiser of Germany)

IV.

German Social Problems.

The policy that kept in view the welfare of the workers unquestionably imposed a heavy burden upon all the industrial elements of Germany in the matter of competition in the world market, through the well-known laws for the protection of workingmen. This was especially true in relation to an industrial system like the Belgian, which could, without hindrance, squeeze the last drop out of the human reserves of Belgium and pay low wages, without feeling any pangs of conscience nor compassion for the sinking morale of the exhausted, unprotected people. By means of my social legislation I made such conditions impossible in Germany, and I caused it to be introduced also in Belgium, during the war, by General von Bissing, in order to promote the welfare of the Belgian workers. First of all, however, this legislation is—to use a sporting term—a handicap upon German industry in the battle of world competition; it alienated many big leaders of industry, which, from their point of view, was quite natural. But the lord of the land must always bear in mind the welfare of the whole nation; therefore, I went my way unswervingly.

Those workers, on the other hand, who blindly followed the Socialist leaders gave me no word fo thanks for the protection created for them nor for the work I had done. Between them and me lies the motto of the Hohenzollerns: "Suum cuique." That means "To each his own"—not, as the social democrats would have it: "To every one the same!"

I also harbored the idea of preventing to some extent competitive warfare, at least in the industrial world of the European continent, by bringing about a sort of quota-fixing in foreign lands, thereby facilitating production and making possible a healthier mode of life among the working classes.

There is great significance in the impression which foreign workers got in studying Germany's social legislation. A few years before the war people in England, under the pressure of labor troubles, awoke to the conviction that better care must be taken of the workers. As a result of this, commissions visited Germany, some of them composed of workingmen. Guided by representative Germans, among them Socialists, they visited the industrial regions, factories, benevolent institutions, sanatoria of insurance companies, etc., and were astonished at all the things they saw. At the farewell dinner given them the English leader of the workingmen's deputation turned to Bebel and made this concluding remark:

"After all we have seen of what is done in Germany for the workers, I ask you: Are you people still socialists?" And the Englishman remarked to a German that they would be quite satisfied if they would succeed, after long fights in Parliament, in putting through one-tenth of what had already been accomplished years before in Germany toward bettering the condition of the laboring classes.

British Policy Of Encirclement.

I had observed with interest these visits of the English deputations and marvelled at their ignorance of German conditions. But I marvelled even more at a question asked by the English government, though the channel of the English embassy, on the same subject, which betrayed an absolutely amazing lack of knowledge on the progress made in Germany in the province of social reform. I questioned the English ambassador, remarking that England, having been represented in 1890 at the Berlin social congress, must certainly have been informed, at least through the embassy, of the Reichstag debates, which had dealt in a detailed way with the various social measures. The ambassador replied that the same thing had also occurred to him and caused him to have the earlier records of the embassy investigated, whereupon, it had transpired that the embassy had sent the fullest reports on the subject to London and that thorough reports had been had been forwarded home concerning every important stage in the progress of social refrorm; but, "because they came from Germany, nobody ever read them; they were simply pigeon-holed and remained there ever since; it is a downright shame; Germany does not interest people at home."

Thus the Briton, with a shrug of his shoulders. Neither the British king nor parliament had enough conscience or time to desire to work for the betterment of the working class. The "policy of encirclement" for the annihilation of Germany, especially working ppoulation, was, in their eyes, far more important and rewarding. On the 9th of November 1918 the German radical-socialist leaders, with their like-minded followers, join-

'Jim' Woodward Forgets Politics In Wedded Bliss

"Elopes" to Marietta With Mrs. Violet McCraney Tuesday Afternoon.

James G. Woodward, four times mayor of Atlanta and a candidate in the recent run-over primary, and Mrs. Violet E. McCraney, also of Atlanta, were married at Marietta, Ga., Tuesday afternoon. The wedding was a surprise to the friends of the former mayor.

The ceremony was performed by Judge J. M. Gann, ordinary of Cobb county, who was requested by Mr. Woodward to keep the wedding a secret for 30 days. Others acquainted with the news, however, let it leak out.

Mr. Woodward and his bride returned to Atlanta Tuesday night.

"We are not a runaway couple," Mr. Woodward is said to have stated to Judge Gann. "We are old enough to know what we are doing. We would like to keep this quiet for a few weeks."

Judge Gann said both were laughing and happy and departed in a hurry to catch their car. Mrs. McCraney resides at 580 Simpson street and is the widow of James M. McCraney.

Mr. Woodward was defeated by Councilman Walter A. Sims in the recent mayoralty race in the municipal primary. He had not engaged in politics actively since the close of his last term as mayor in 1916.

BRITISH GENERAL ORDERS TURKS OUT OF NEUTRAL ZONE

TURKS AND BRITISH BOTH ENTRENCHING

Wives and Families of Allied Officials Leaving Constantinople—British Reinforcements Arrive.

ARMY DEMANDS KING LEAVE GREEK THRONE.

Athens, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—A crisis is rapidly developing. The king has proclaimed martial law. Eight thousand troops at Saloniki have revolted, insisting on a change in the government.

Sections of the army in the Aegian Islands have also revolted. They demand that the king abdicate.

Part of the army in Thrace demands that the king join the army there.

Constantinople, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—The British general, Sir Charles Harrington, commander-in-chief of the allied forces here, has ordered the Turks out of the neutral zone around the Dardanelles. He has sent an ultimatum to Mustapha Kemal Pasha at Smyrna, allowing 48 hours for withdrawal of the nationalist cavalry detachments which have occupied Kum Kaleh, at the entrance to the Dardanelles, as well as Eren Keui, to the southwest of Chanak, and Bigha.

This action was taken by General Harrington after several requests had been made by the British commanders in the areas mentioned that the Turkish forces withdraw, and after the Turks had begun to entrench. Likewise, the British troops are throwing up entrenchments, erecting barbed wire entanglements and making every preparation for both defense and an offensive movement if that becomes necessary.

Yesterday it was announced that the wives and families of the allied authorities would remain in Constantinople but today some of them had been sent out of the city, and others were preparing to depart. This carries it own significance. Precautions to prevent disorders in the capital

JURY DEADLOCKED IN SELLERS' CASE

Self-Defense Plea of Man Who Slew Strickland Is Attacked By Slain Man's Survivors.

Argument in the case of I. A. Sellers, charged with stabbing to death W. E. Strickland in a rooming house at 85 East Hunter street on July 5, was completed late Tuesday afternoon and at a late hour last night the jury was still deliberating the case.

The trial of Sellers was begun in criminal division of Fulton superior court early in the morning and by 5 o'clock examination of witnesses and arguments by prosecuting and defense attorneys were complete, the jury receiving the charge of Judge John W. Humphries and retiring to reach a verdict.

On the stand in his own behalf Sellers testified that he acted in defense of his own life when the stabbing of Strickland occurred and vigorously denied that he was prompted by any malicious motives in taking the life of the dead man.

Related Events.

"I was invited by Strickland and his wife to their rooms for a drink of whisky," asserted Sellers. "After accepting a glass containing liquor a dispute arose and when I attempted to leave the room my way was blocked by Strickland and his wife. I cannot recall any of the details of the killing and I do not remember whether

BIG NEW BUSINESS BLOCK PROPOSED

Project of Building on Spring and Hunter Corner Broached at Spring Street Viaduct Meeting.

Strong possibility of erection of a downtown building at Spring and Marietta streets developed Tuesday following the appearance Monday afternoon of Benjamin D. Watkins, well-known real estate dealer, before the joint session of the viaduct committee of the bond commission and the bridge committee of council. At the meeting plans were laid for the Hunter street approach to the Spring street viaduct. Mr. Watkins agreed to accept $1,000 a front foot for a strip of land 12 feet in depth belonging to the John T. Glenn estate at the northeast corner of Marietat and Spring.

Mr. Watkins, in agreeing to accept $1,000 a foot for the strip which it was proposed to utilize in building the and which is now covered by a building said to be inadequate, stated to the joint meeting that it might not be necessary for the city to re-erect the wall that must necessarily be torn down to secure use of the strip, in view of the fact that there is a possibility that the Glenn heirs may erect a handsome new building on the site of the present structure.

Mr. Watkins said Tuesday that he has been closely investigating, as agent for the Glenn heirs, the need and probable cost of a semi-office or high-class loft building on the Spring-Marietta street property, adding that in his opinion a real demand exists for a building of this type which could primarily serve as a loft building but which could easily be converted into an exclusive office building.

The well-known realtor and developer made it plain that plans along this line at this time are indefinite, but he ap-

Death of "Tom" Watson Blow to All Georgians

News of Sudden Passing of Junior Senator Means Deep Sorrow to Countless Friends.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.

French Lick Springs, Ind., September 26.—(Special.)—The death of Senator Thomas E. Watson will cause more genuine sorrow in Georgia—sorrow that penetrates the souls and literally brings tears of anguish from the very hearts of men and women,—than that of any Georgian in the memory of the living.

It is because of the deep and unfaltering hold he had upon the masses, as distinguished from the classes; and for whom, from away back in 1892 when he sacrificed his seat to the lower house in congress to lead the people's party, until the recent hour of his death, he waged an unbroken fight for their emancipation from what he believed, and conscientiously, the bondage of big business, concentrated wealth, and predatory interests. The vigor of his speech and the virility of his pen; the burning satire and the merciless vindictiveness made his force potential in every channel in which it was directed, and by the same token it congealed about him a personal following that was veritably a clan in unity and cataclysm in action in that it stood ready to do his bidding without challenge or hesitation, and without thought of consequences, in every civic and political issue in which he became interested.

It is doubtful if there is in America today another whose personal equation has entered so powerfully and irrevocably into the political history of a state or section. And yet, conscious of their political power—a balance as it has been in every election in Georgia for nearly twenty years—Thomas E. Watson never used it as a dema-

CONTRACT IS LET FOR CITY MARKET

Impressive Ceremonies to Mark Breaking of Earth for New Building Thursday—Officials to Attend.

The contract for the new half-million dollar market building, which will be built at Peachtree and Cain streets, was awarded Tuesday to the Turner Construction company, of Atlanta and New York. Building operations will begin Thursday, with ceremonies in which the civic leaders of Atlanta will take part, and will be rushed to completion.

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Woman's club will turn the first shovel full of dirt, following which Mayor James L. Key, president; W. O. Foote, of the chamber of commerce; William M. Brownlee, president of the Atlanta Rotary club, and other notables of Atlanta, including the leaders of all civic organizations, will make short addresses. Moving pictures will be made for a permanent record of the initiation of one of Atlanta's permanent civic centers.

House 60 Merchants.

The new building when completed will house 50 to 60 merchants, all of whom will be approved by the board of directors of the Capital City Building and Market company, and all of whom will comply in every detail to the stringent regulations laid down by this body assuring cleanliness and purity of the foodstuffs offered for sale.

The building itself will be 243 feet

NAMING SENATOR IN WATSON PLACE WILL BE DELAYED

No Action Will Be Taken to Fill Vacant Seat Until Funeral in Thomson, Thursday.

STATE CONVENTION EXPECTED TO ACT

Any Appointee of Governor Hardwick Would Have No Opportunity to Act as Senator.

No definite steps will be taken toward naming a successor to the late United States Senator Thomas E. Watson until after his funeral services which will be held at Thomson Thursday, it was learned at the capitol Tuesday. Much doubt exists as to whether or not the governor will appoint a successor and also as to what action the state convention will take at its meeting in Macon October 4.

Under the election laws of Georgia the governor has authority to appoint a successor to a United States senator in case of the death or resignation of that official but such appointee may serve only for the period intervening between the time of his appointment and the next regular election. The next regular election in Georgia wil be held November 7, therefore, the governor could appoint an ad interim senator whose successor must be elected in the November election. A senator so appointed could exercise no senatorial function, however, because congress adjourned last week to reconvene on the first Monday in December. By that date the people of Georgia will have elected a senator at the ballot box to succeed Senator Watson's unexpired term of four years. Senator Watson was elected in 1920 for six years, which would carry his successor from November 7 to November, 1926, a four-year term.

Many Mentioned.

Although a number of names of some of the most prominent men in the state have been mentioned as successors to Senator Watson, these men have requested The Constitution to say that their names were mentioned without their authority or consent and that they have refused to discuss the matter until after the funeral of Senator Watson at Thomson Thursday.

It is generally agreed that there is no doubt as to the authority of the

Watson Is Dead; UniqueMonarchy Loses Its King

He Died as He Wanted to Die—In Harness and Fighting.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Tom Watson is dead.

Tom Watson, for nearly two score years the sturdy leader of a distinctive group of Georgia citizens, died at his post of duty like a soldier. He died fighting, in the way he always said he wanted to die—in harness.

No state in the union ever produced a man exactly like Tom Watson and no state ever will. He was the idol of his followers. Few men ever commanded the devotion of his adherents as did the sage of Hickory Hill. His words were to his followers a holy gospel. His edicts, once given to his legions, were as unchangeable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. He commanded, his followers obeyed under a strange kind of private monarchy he builded within the heart of a sovereign state in a republican government.

Man of the Soil.

In the hills and valleys of Georgia, where the men follow the never-ending furrow and obtain their daily bread in the sweat of their face, the grief is deepest today. Tom Watson was a son of the soil and while he had staunch followers within the cities and towns the great bulk of his following was found far from the beaten trails and distant from the white lights and bustle of the congested centers.

Sometimes the Watson strength ebbed and flowed—now a sweeping

WILL BRING BODY OF SENATOR BACK TO GEORGIA HOME

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS TO ESCORT BODY HOME

Death of Distinguished Son of Georgia Comes Unexpectedly—Spoke in Senate on Friday.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.
BY GLADSTONE M. WILLIAMS.
(Copyrighted by The Constitution.)

Washington, September 26.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Accompanied by a funeral cortege, composed of his colleagues, his family and his friends, the body of United States Senator Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, dead since early Tuesday morning from an attack of bronchial asthma, will leave Washington Wednesday afternoon for his native state, where it will be returned to the soil from whence it came.

Two private cars, leaving the capital at 3:15 p. m., will bear the dead statesman to his home. In the one, surrounded by his family and friends, the caisson will be; in the other, his erstwhile associates in the senate, and members of the house, will ride in silent tribute to a departed colleague. The procession will arrive in Thomson, via Augusta, at 11:55 o'clock Thursday morning, and the funeral will be held that afternoon at 1 o'clock.

At the request of Mrs. Watson, Dr. E. J. Forester, recently appointed a member of the state board of education by Governor Hardwick, pastor of the Sparta Baptist church, and former pastor of Senator Thomas E. Watson, and the senator's life-long intimate friend, will preach Senator Watson's funeral. The Junior Order of American Mechanics, of which organization the late senator was a member, will take part in the funeral ceremonies.

Honorary Escort.

Senators New, Indiana; Shortridge, California; Brandagee, Connecticut; Dial, South Carolina; Fletcher, Florida; Heflin, Alabama; Shield, Tennessee; Harrison, Mississippi; Trammel, Florida; Cameron, Arizona, and Oddie, of Nevada. Representatives Sisson, Mississippi; Smithwick, Florida; Byrnes, South Carolina, and the entire Georgia delegation in the lower house, four of whom are in Washington and will accompany the body from here, as follows:

Congressman Vinson, Lankford, Bell and Park.

Other members of the Georgia delegation were wired to join the cortege in the state.

In addition to the above, the following persons will accompany Senator Watson's body to the state:

Mrs. Alice Louise Lytle, associated with the senator for fourteen years in the publication of his Columbia Sentinel; Miss Sarah Orr, private secretary; Cranton Williams, private secretary and personal representative of Senator William J. Harris, who is in Europe; Justine Reese, and a large number of friends and newspapermen.

Mrs. Watson, wife of the senator, is not in Washington, having returned to Thomson several days ago.

Died Early Tuesday.

Senator Watson died early Tuesday morning, at 3 o'clock, following an attack of asthma from which he has been suffering for 14 years. He had been slightly ill for the past several days, but physicians and members of his household had not regarded the malady seriously. Although he was confined to his bed the greater part of Sunday, he was thought to be steadily improving, and ate a hearty dinner, it is said. He also expressed a desire to go for a ride, attendants stated.

During the day he dictated editorials for his paper, and one of the last thoughts to which he gave expression was concerning the editorials:

"Was the dictation all right?" he asked.

Early in the evening he suffered an attack of asthma, and his attending physician, Dr. Grant S. Barnhart, was called. Treatment appeared to relieve him but later the attack was repeated. This time he died.

Survivors.

Senator Watson is survived by his wife, one brother, W. A. Watson; a sister, Mrs. Julia Cliatt; two granddaughters, Misses Georgia Watson and Georgia Lee, of Thomson, and a son-in-law, Oscar Lee, of Atlanta.

The Georgia statesman had made all preparations for leaving the capital for Georgia today. From his rapid improvement over his condition of several days past, when the illness first confined him to his home, it was thought that he would be in good shape to make the trip, the senator himself expressing a desire to go. Accordingly everything had been placed in readiness, and his personal baggage had been checked. But the grim spectre of death checkmated his plans.

The home in which he died was one that had been rented for the summer months. It is located in the aristocratic and exclusive Chevy Chase district of the nation's capital. In many respects it is said to resemble the Georgian's private home estate at Thomson, not having the bustle and ordinary disturbance of the city, and being located in a garden of cultivated foliage. The quietude of the place is said to have made a particular appeal to the senator, who was more wont to pursue his studies than to mingle with the crowd. It was suggestive of old "Hickory Hill," his Thomson home, so the repose was pleasanter; he died amid his own surroundings, it was observed.

Many Pay Respects.

Congressman Vinson was the first member of the Georgia delegation to arrive at the home this morning and made arrangements for the trip to Georgia. He was followed by a large number of officials of the government who came to pay respect to the deceased Georgian.

As a token of the esteem in which the Georgia senator was held, hundreds of telegrams began pouring in from over the state and country, expressing condolence at his sudden death. Among the lot was a letter from President Harding, who, together with the first lady of the land, offered sympathy in the unexpected bereavement of the family. Georgians were particularly profuse in their interest, numbers wanting to come to Washington to escort the bier to the state.

Senator Watson's last illness started in the form of an attack of asthma about ten days ago. Attending physicians did not consider the malady serious, but more or less a recurrence of his asthmatic condition, with which he has suffered to some extent during the past.

Spoke in Senate Friday.

The last attack confined him to bed for two days, but even then he was permitted to get up at intervals. Against the advice of his physicians Senator Watson went to the senate last Friday when the body adjourned, in order that he might say good-bye to his associates. His last utterance on the floor was at that time, when he arose to explain his absence during the vote to over-ride the president's veto in the bonus bill. He said that he had been detained by illness, but that he would have voted to pass the bonus over President Harding's head had he been present.

Friday night and Saturday Senator Watson was reported to be much improved. Members of his family and office force stated that he spent a very restful night and that he appeared to be in splendid spirits. Saturday morning, however, he made another visit to his office at the capitol, and is said to have suffered some from the exertion. That night he had another attack of asthma, which was more severe than any during his present illness.

His nurse and Mrs. Lytle, who were with him constantly, stated that he apparently had greatly improved by Sunday morning, and his doctors thought he would be able to make the trip to Georgia this afternoon as planned.

Spent Day Reading.

During Sunday Mr. Watson spent most of the day reading, remaining in bed although he expressed the desire to get up and go for a ride.

An examination of the effects in the room in which he died showed that he spent the last day of his life reading historical works, a subject very dear to his heart.

Near the bed where he died were found such books as Charles The Twelfth (an old volume he had a few days before picked up at a second hand book store; he was fond of going to such places, often spending hours there and coming away laden with forgotten authors).

"Nations of the World," and "The English Annual" were two similar historical volumes he had been reading during the day.

About 8 o'clock Sunday night Senator Watson was seized with a violent attack of his chronic illness. Immediately Dr. Grant S. Barnhart, the physician in charge, was summoned. Although conscious the senator was suffering intense pain, a strangling effect caused by his inflamed respiratory organs. It was necessary to give him strychnine for relief. The compound stimulated him, and he revived sufficiently to dismiss his attendents for the night. He felt easier and would try to get some sleep. Dr. Barnhart expressed the belief that he would be all right by morning.

Second Seizure.

Later in the night he was again seized by a paroxysm of coughing which immediately brought members of the household to his bedside. This time two physicians were called, Dr. Thomas K. Conrad being the second.

Senator Watson was found to be unconscious. He was breathing heavily; his heart was bad. Doctors made every effort to relieve him. But at near 3 o'clock in the morning he expired.

In the room were Mrs. Lytle, managing editor of the Columbia Sentinel; Justine Reese, the senator's personal clerk, and Dr. Conrad.

The immediate cause of his death was ascribed to respiratory failure, while the remote cause was due to bronchial asthma, Dr. Conrad said.

Senator Watson's heart, it was stated, continued to beat even after his respiratory organs ceased to function. This prompted physicians to attempt to resuscitate him with exercise, but all efforts failed.

International Repute.

Perhaps no member of the United States senate in recent years has gained the prominence Senator Watson did during such a short tenure of office. Nor was his coming unheralded. The Georgia senator's literary achievements had already established for him an international reputation, and his political career had made of him already a national figure.

Elected to the senate in 1920 by one of the largest majorities ever given a candidate for that office in Georgia, Mr. Watson immediately thrust himself into the affairs of the chamber. He did not follow the custom of new members of the senate to wait two years before being heard.

His first speech was on the Colombian treaty, which he opposed with all the vehemence at his command, and his address is said to have made a profound impression upon his colleagues, who regarded him as a scholar of the first school.

The Georgian's second major fight in the senate was in connection with the ratification of the seevn treaties negotiated at the Washington disarmament conference. He was recognized as of the leaders in the opposition forces, and his speeches on the subject were full of historical value, evoking wide-spread comment. A congenial antagonist of all foreign alliances, Senator Watson was one of the chief advocates of the school of thought in America which believes in a policy of isolation.

Army Brutality Probe.

Senator Watson's next experience in the senate to bring him into national prominence was in connection with the so-called army investigation conducted by the senate military affairs committee. Contrary to common report, the Georgia senator did not request an investigation of the kind the affair arose of certain charges of brutality to American soldiers during the war he recited on the floor. The charges were challeneged by members of the military affairs committee and Senator Watson offered to substantiate them. Whereupon an investigation was ordered.

A singular feature about the investigation is that the committee, although months have passed since the hearing, has never issued a report. all of which is looked upon as a vindication of the Georgia senators charges.

Members of President Harding's cabinet and even the chief executive himself were not immune from Mr. Watson's scathing criticism when he thought the circumstances demanded such. He was looked upon as the most fiery member of the senate, a southerner of the old school, somewhat akin to the late Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, or Robert Toombs and Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia.

Tillman Recalled.

His severe denunciation of Secretary Hoover, whom he disliked because of certain of his policies, and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, recalled to observers today the heated attacks of the hot blooded South Carolinian when he was a character at the capital.

Regarded as one of the most eloquent speakers in congress, Mr. Watson was not afraid to use his tongue; neither did he spare colleague or friend when he found cause. His eighteen months in the senate found him the center of more parliamentary wrangles than any other member, it is said. An incident peculiar to his service is being recalled from the time when he and Senator Lodge, the republican leader and author of several historical works, engaged in a dispute over some abstruse subject of history. Other members of the chamber sat by while the "two scholars of the body," as these are known, thrashed out the question. Observers called it a draw.

Senator Watson engaged in another similar controversy with Senator Borah over certain policies of Washington concerning the bonus, and once he decisively refuted Senator Gooding's misconstruction of slavery conditions. He acquired the reputation of being able to recite any important historical reference with uncanny alertness, which made of him a man feared in senatorial debates.

During consideration of the tariff bill, which consumed the greater part of the summer, Senator Watson made a number of speeches denouncing what he described as extravagant and unjustifiable levies upon the masses, for whom all of his battles were fought.

The proposed duties on potash he particularly assailed, charging that they were designed to increase the burdens of the farmer. He dealt heavy blows to the republican leadership for their "logrolling" tactics employed in connection with the tariff. In his official organ he made similar charges, carrying editorial after editorial upon the subject.

Attacked Liberian Loan.

More recently his attacks were centered upon the proposed Liberian loan. Less than three weeks ago he was seen attacking the bill—his last speech in the senate. It was during that speech that he made the sensational statement concerning collection of the foreign debt owed the United States. The incident offers an index to his general high-strung disposition in that he advocated seizing all French ships in American waters if necessary to collect interest on obligations owed this country.

On the bonus bill Senator Watson's sentiment was divided. He was confronted with his innate opposition to all increased taxation, which he recognized as necessary to the enactment of that measure and with his favor of the general bonus principle. While his last utterance on the floor of the chamber was to announce that had he been present he would have voted to override the president's veto, he expressed himslf upon several occasions as favoring only certain methods for raising the bonus expenditure. In the end, however, he stated that he felt he should sacrifice his opposition to the bill as proposed.

He was one of the few members of the senate to vote against the confirmation of Taft for justice of the supreme court.

Mr. Watson had prepared material for a speech he was to deliver against the Dyer anti-lynching bill when that measure was brought before the senate, believing it to be unconstitutional and a play at politics by publican leaders. He was expected to be one of the foremost critics of the legislation.

Born in 1856.

The son of John and Ann Eliza (Maddox) Watson, the Georgia senator was born in Columbia county, Georgia, in 1856, celebrating his 66th birthday on September 5 last. He declared at the time that he felt in splendid health.

Picking up from here, a brief summary of his career as contained in the Congressional Record, is as follows:

"Studied two years in Mercer university; taught school; admitted to bar in 1875; practiced in Thomson, Ga.; member of house of representatives 1882-83; democratic elector at large 1888; member fifty-second congress 1891-93, as populist; was candidate and claimed election at elections in 1892 and 1894, but his opponent was given the certificate; resumed practice of law in 1895; while in congress secured first appropriation for free delivery of rural mails that congress ever passed; nominated for vice president at St. Louis populist convention, which indorsed Bryan for president, 1896; for sometime conducted populist paper at Atlanta; nominated for president by people's party 1904, and made active campaign to revive the party; began publication of Tom Watson's Magazine in New York in 1905; published Watson's Jeffersonian and The Weekly Jeffersonian since 1906.

"Author of the 'Story of France,' 1898; 'Life of Thomas Jefferson,' 1900; 'Life of Napoleon,' 1902; 'Bethany,' a study and story of the old south, 1904; 'Life and Times of Andrew Jackson,' 1907; 'Hand Book of Politics and Economics,' 1908; 'The Methods of Foreign Missions Exposed,' 1909; 'The Roman Catholic Hierarchy,' 1910; 'Socialist and Socialism,' 1909; prosecuted in United States court for publication of three chapters in the 'Roman Catholic Heirarchy,' bill quashed by Judge Rufus E. Foster, 1914; second indictment procured based on publication of same chapters; Judge William W. Lambdin overruled motion to quash; case tried and jury voted 10 to 2 for acquittal; tried again November, 1916 and acquitted. Proprietor and editor Columbia Sentinal, Thomson, Ga., established after Wilson administration had withdrawn mailing privileges and thus destroyed publications already referred to, said publications having become obnoxious to said administration because they opposed the conscription law, the espionage act, and similar war measures.

"Eentered race for United States senate in 1920 as anti-Wilson, anti-league and anti-war measures democrats, received nomination over Senator Hoke Smith and Governor Hugh M. Dorsey in democratic primary; elected over Harry S. Edwards, pro-league independent at November, 1920, election for a term of six years, beginning March 4, 1921, receiving 124,630 votes to 6,700 for Edwards."

Famed as Author.

As an author Mr. Watson was known chiefly for his, "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," and "Life and Times of Andrew Jackson," the latter of which he recently revised and offered to Harper & Bros., publishers, of New York. The volume was highly praised by the publishers, who, are at the present engaged in putting it on the market. His works on France and Napolean are said to be master pieces on the subject.

A short while ago he completed a separate volume on the "Battle of Waterloo," which he was preparing to submit to the publishers. The manuscript has been finally perfected, it is said.

Several years ago Mr. Watson provided an endowment fund of $5,000 for needy young men entering Mercer university, which he attended. At the same time he offered an annual gold medal for the best speaker in the institution.

Those close to the senator have stated that the lack of gratitude on the part of students and officials of the university receiving benefits under the endowment was a great disappointment to him in recent years. He is quoted as having said that his efforts to assist the downtrodden were unappreciated; that it had caused him to become dejected. According to members of his family, Mr. Watson never received letters from beneficiaries of his gratuitious acts.

This is said to be responsible in part for the report that the assignment of his very valuable library, consisting of several thousand volumes, to Mercer university in his will of a few years ago has been revoked. It could not be ascertained today whether the will as originally made was changed in that respect.

First R. F. D. Appropriation.

As a member of the national house of representatives during the 52nd congress, 1891, he secured the first congressional mandatory appropriation for the rural free delivery of mail in the United States, the pride of his legislative achievements.

The postoffice department, in a recent summary of the development of the American R. F. D. system, mentions Senator Watson in this connection. Out of it has grown one of the greatest institutions of the nation and the fact that he was credited with being its father was a source of much pleasure to him, it is said.

It is said that all the men in the senate who amount to anything are those who are seen with books in their hands. Much of the senate is half-educated; more of it went through the orthodox routine of school and college, without their mentality being awakened or vivified in the slightest degree. The residue are those with some genuine intellectual attainments, men with disciplined minds who believe there is much wisdom to be learned in books, that there is some virtue in meditation, that even a United States senator should now and then shut his door and retire into silence to consider the world as it really is.

Borah of Idaho is a student and a man of thought. Lodge of Massachusetts, although over inclined to rest upon the tradition of his scholarship, is a person of no mean brain; and Watson of Georgia was the peer of Lodge. He lacked Lodge's poise and Lodge's brahmanic rigidity of political conception, but he probably knew more than Lodge about a wider variety of subjects and his mind was more supple.

Genius Undefined.

He was in the twilight of life, perhaps, but by no means in the decrepit darkness of 80 years, which is already creeping over half a dozen of his colleagues. He had in his makeup a base of that sort of genius that defied definition; it puzzled people and they consequently were inclined to distrust it. Nevertheless, there was Senator Watson, a product of our own time and generation and environment, worthy of notice because he was just what he was.

Looking across the senate to the right of the president's chair, one would find him seated behind a desk piled high with books, documents, pamphlets and papers of all descriptions. He always had his nose in a book, ready to read into the record some abstruse reference the aptness of which was not always apparent.

Power In State.

Senator Watson has been a power in Georgia politics for a generation. The people of the state either disliked or worshiped him as a lesser diety. He had few lukewarm adherents.

Concerning the department of justice, he was one of Attorney-General Daugherty's bitterest opponents. He did not hesitate to call various persons mentioned in Daugherty's case crooks and thugs, and in doing so he waived all immunities, personal and official. Dependent upon his moods, he was the cordial southern gentleman, who would talk to one for hours on ancient and modern history, or any other topic within the wide range of his interest. Again he would dismiss one with an abrupt wave of his hand and a toss of the head.

He had deep moods of introspection, when he retreated into himself to ponder on folly, political and personal, of men and parliaments and races. But he would come up smiling his grim fixed smile with some new wrong to be set aright in a world that is all awry. You could not fix him but with the cause of what he deemed best for the masses, from whom he gained his incentive; you might put him into a novel or a play, or lampoon him, but beyond this, nothing.

Such was Senator Watson, patriot, Georgian and statesman, to be remembered for generations to come, returning to his home for the first time in nearly a year—and dead.

SORROW REIGNS AT HICKORY HILL

Telegrams of Condolence From All Over Country Pour Into Birthplace of Dead Senator.

Thomson, Ga., September 26.—Thomson is saddened over the death of Senator Thomas E. Watson, and while the heart of this little town, the birthplace of the man, is being torn with grief, telegrams are pouring in from all over the country, carrying with them words of consolation to the family. Among the telegrams, two particularly are noticeable, one from President Harding, in Washington, and the other from Governor Hardwick, now in Quebec, Canada.

"Hickory Hill," the famous Watson home, was open today as close friends of Mrs. Watson and the family came to say words of comfort. The Watson printing plant, where Mr. Watson's publications were printed, is closed and so is the Bank of McDuffie county, of which Mr. Watson was president. Crepe hangs on the doors of both establishments.

Funeral Arrangements.

Funeral arrangements were made known late this afternoon. The funeral will be conducted Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, services to be held at the residence and interment will follow in the Thomson cemetery. The body of the Georgia senator is to be laid to rest beside the gave of his father and mother. The mother and father of Mrs. Watson are also buried on the same section. The grave of Mrs. O. S. Lee, daughter of Mr. Watson, is in the same cemetery, but some distance away.

Rev. E. J. Forrester, of Sparta, Ga., formerly pastor of the Thomson Baptist church and a close friend of Mr. Watson, will officiate at the funeral services, assisted by Rev. J. T. Eakes, pastor of the Methodist church of Thomson.

The body is to reach Thomson in a special car, accompanied by a committee of United States senators, at 11:55 o'clock Thursday morning. The route from Washington will be over the Atlantic Coast Line railway to Augusta, the party leaving Augusta on the 10:45 o'clock Georgia train for Thomson.

Surviving Relatives.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Georgia Durham Watson, Mr. Watson is survived by a long list of relatives, including O. S. Lee, Miss Georgia Lee, Mrs. J. D. Watson, Miss Georgia Watson, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Watson and family; Mrs. Julia Civatt and family; Mrs. J. F. Watson and family and Mrs. Ophelia Watson.

Mr. Watson was a member of the Thomson Baptist church and a member of Woodlawn council No. 29, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Augusta, which organization will attend the funeral in a body. The burial services will be conducted by the junior order. The United States flag over the junior order hall here is at half-mast.

All business houses in Thomson will be closed during Thursday afternoon out of respect for Mr. Watson.

The last editorial written by Mr. Watson for publication in his paper, The Columbia Sentinel, is now in the hands of the foreman of the Watson printing plant at Thomson. The copy is handwritten, and is prized very highly by the foreman.

Condolences Sent For Mrs. Watson From White House

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, September 26.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Among the numbers of telegrams and communications addressed to the family of Senator Watson, following his death early Monday morning, was the following from President Harding to Mrs. Watson, wife or the senator:

"The White House, September 26.

"Mrs. Thomas E. Watson,

"My Dear Mrs. Watson:

"I have just learned of the sudden and unexpected death of your distinguished husband, Senator Thomas E. Watson. This note is to express my sympathy to you in the hour of great sorrow. Mrs. Harding asks me to include her in an expression of our most sincere condolence."

"Very truly yours,

"WARREN G. HARDING."

DEATH OF TOM WATSON IS BLOW TO GEORGIANS

gogue nor did he abuse it or temporize with it, or capitalize it for personal gain. A political asset of priceless value it was, and yet there is no man in Georgia, it matters not what may have been his personal attitude to Mr. Watson or his policies, who can say that he bartered and traded that asset for the private interest of its holder.

WAS SERVANT OF ALL GEORGIANS.

When he became a United States senator in March 4, 1921, he became a servant of all the people of Georgia, and watching him closely as I did in every phase of his public career, I do not believe that any man of prior or contemporaneous service more zealously, unselfishly and unfettered tried to be a just and fair representative of all the people, political friends and foes alike, than did the junior senator whose usefulness cannot be buried with the body from which the soul has now gone.

Thomas E. Watson—"Tom" as he loved to hear himself called—had always been a champion of what is unwisely called "the common people." As a practicing lawyer, when he traveled from one end of Georgia to the other in criminal cases, in which he specialized, he invariably fought the battle of the defendant and not the prosecutor. The position of prosecuting attorney was offered him when a young man and he declined it.

"If I err in the practice of law," said he, "I shall err on the side of mercy" and there is no man living in Georgia who has torn the chains of felony from more men charged with infraction of laws.

"I suspect some of them were guilty," he once said to me, "but I would rather free a thousand guilty men than to have the consciousness of having convicted an innocent man."

ALWAYS HELPED THE UNDER DOG.

It was this spirit for the man who was down, for the farmer who was struggling, for the laborer who was fighting the tide, that made him the idol of the poor. It was consistency in his ideals and the fearlessness of his crusades, coupled with his personal integrity and the vigor of his fighting spirit, that distinguished him among men and made him unique not only as a publicist, but as a politician and later as the great and forceful statesman that he was at the hour of his death.

Senator Watson became a national character in 1896 when he headed the people's party ticket. At that time the party, known as the "populists," being a political offspring of the old farmers' alliance, was of such recognizable strength throughout the country that several members succeeded in getting seats in the house and senate branches of congress. Among them was Marion Butler, of North Carolina, who became chairman of the people's party national committee. As a boy reporter at the time Mr. Watson, candidate for president, said to me "Butler is a fox." I asked could I quote him. He said yes. Those three words became the internal issue in the campaign, and illustrated the outspoken, unafraid, blunt characteristic that lived with Senator Watson as a part of his being, and made for him numberless enemies but cemented friendships that nothing but death could sever.

After the memorable national battles of 1896 and 1900 Mr. Watson beban the publication of Watson's Magazine in New York, subsequently moving it to Georgia, when he also began The Jeffersonian, a weekly dealing more intimately with state affairs. His power as an editorial writer gave him national fame. His style was epigrammatic, and, of satire, he became a master. His pen literally burned at times with venom. Again it flowed with that sweetness of sympathetic touch that it illuminated with its eloquence.

HIS LITERARY WORK FAMOUS.

It was in these years that followed that he perfected his "Story of France" and "History of Napoleon," books that became as notable in Europe as in America, although he never crossed the ocean. I recall that on a visit in Paris some years ago I dropped into a book shop and asked if he had "Watson's History of France." He replied that he not only kept it in both English and French text, but that the French edition was one of the compulsory volumes used in the history course in the schools of his country.

In that one respect a tribute was paid to him as a historian that has, perhaps, never been attained by another in the annals of time.

Mr. Watson's life of Jefferson, and also of Lee, and his single contribution to fiction, "Bethany," are standard works in any library, and his scores of pamphlets dealing with his irresistible and unyielding fight on the Catholic hierarchy gave him, long before he entered the United States senate, a position in national life that served him well when he became a member of that great deliberative body. For many years Senator Lodge had long been regarded as the premier scholar of the senate. Senator Watson, of Georgia, quickly shared that honor with him, and before he died had become recognized as the best read man in the senate.

It was this readiness of historical facts, always quickly summoned from that masterful brain of his, that made him indefatigable in debate. It was not long after he entered the senate in 1921, therefore, before he became one of the debate leaders on the floor, and though he never sacrificed nor yielded an outstanding principle in his public career, many of which had been regarded as radical or extreme, it may be said with truthfulness that in the old orthodox tenets of democratic faith he was firm and stalwart to the end.

FOUGHT HARD AGAINST TARIFF BILL.

The latter months of his life were spent in fighting for the interests of the great masses, to whom he had devoted his life, by trying to prevent the passage of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill—a futile fight, of course, but he fought as he always did, with all of the energy and force of his heart and soul and body. It was the terrific strain upon him in this one battle for the consumers of America that no doubt hastened the end.

Quick tempered, fiery and sometimes impulsive, Senator Watson was one of the gentlest of men—a conversationalist without a peer in Washington public life, a southern gentleman to the manner born, and always surrounded by a group of men who loved to feel the influence of his personality. He was seldom, if ever idle. Reading the newspapers, books and magazines was a pastime.

The preparation of his speeches, the study of national and international problems, the actual labor of library research—these were among his daily tasks. And then his editorial work which he continued to the last, made its demands upon him. And then the answering of mail—the close touch that he maintained with his thousands and thousands of personal friends, some of them old and illiterate, but of big heart and fond memory.

Indefatigable worker, true friend, relentless foe, kind, forgiving but not forgetting, considerate, mild, gentle, unyielding, unflinching, merciless, penetrating, vindictive, theses are the varying and extreme points to which the pendulum of this remarkable man's personal characteristics would swing. With them all, and in whatever mood convictions might find him, his honesty was always as unquestioned as his ability was apparent to all men at all times.

UNIQUE MONARCHY LOSES ITS KING

majority and now a dwindling but aggressive minority—but never did this strength drop below a large group of men whose hearts and souls were bound up in the public career of their revered leader. At all times in the last three decades there has been an army of "Tom Watson men" who were for Watson, "right or wrong."

In stormy political campaigns this army would receive legions of recruits and sometimes it would form a militant wing of some allied force but never did the soldiers in the real Watson army desert the colors or lose a whisper of their loyalty to their commander.

He Swayed the Masses.

When Tom Watson appeared before his people he played on their emotions like a master of the violin plays on his delicate instrument. He swayed the people by his eloquence and inspired them with the fire of his spirit. He put his every energy into his speeches and poured out his words like a flowing stream of molten metal. He molded the opinions and thoughts of his followers like so much putty and with most of them it was only for him to say and for them to do.

For more than three decades Tom Watson was the central figure in numerous Georgia political battles. His strength was largely a balance of power between rival factions and aided by his loyal followers he made and unmade political leaders and high officials for more than 30 years. In some of these campaigns he appeared in person while in others he fought through the columns of his newspaper—but in all cases his methods were those of the aggressive and militant fighter who carried the battle to the enemy.

Was Master Orator.

In his younger days the figure of a slender man with fiery red hair and flashing eye was seen on the stump not only in Georgia but throughout the country as a vigorous speaker in the cause he espoused. His high pitched, keen voice, could be heard for hundreds of yards and his clear enunciation made it possible for him to be heard distinctly by monster crowds. Later the fiery red hair turned to gray but his eye still flashed its fire, and his voice retained its clearness and strength.

During the last two years Tom Watson, although aging rapidly, went through some of the most strenuous and exciting political fighting of his career. His last appearance on the stump was in his campaign for the senate two years ago and in the run-over race for governor the same year in which he appeared in behalf of one of the candidates.

Although physically weak, Tom Watson surprised even his most ardent admirers by the vigor of his fight in the campaign two years ago. He made long trips in an automobile and spoke before tens of thousands of people in a day. At one time during this campaign he was carried for a time in a litter, but appeared on the platform at his speaking date and spoke for hours before great masses of people.

Spoke With Poetic Beauty.

In these speeches Tom Watson always painted a beautiful metaphorical picture of the fire of liberty. He likened it to a coal of fire kept by the savage Indian tribes. He described how these tribes would keep always a coal of fire burning. When they needed flames they would blow this coal and build their fires but always would keep a watchman to see that the coal was not extinguished. His own turbulent political life was much like this coal of fire. Sometimes it would be allowed to cool but never to flicker out. At other times it would be fanned into a consuming flame that destroyed all before it.

Tom Watson was known to his followers as a champion of principles. He put these principles before his people in preference to men or measures. Those who supported these principles and those who opposed them agreed on one thing—that Tom Watson was honest and sincere in his beliefs and that he was willing to fight to the death in support of them.

Born In 1856.

Thomas E. Watson was born in Columbia county September 5, 1856. The place where he was born is now in McDuffie county and some of the land on which he was born now forms a part of "Hickory Hill," the Watson family residence at Thomson. He was the son of John S. and Anna Watson. He was educated in the common schools and later went to Mercer university at Macon where he took an academic and law course. Due to financial reverses of his family he was forced to leave college for a time and taught school for a living.

While in Mercer university he took a deep interest in the study of history and throughout his career he was a student of historical literature. Later much of his fame was due to historical volumes he wrote. He was particularly interested in the history of France and his most famous books concern prominent figures in that country, including his life of Napoleon Bonaparte.

After leaving college he again taught school for a period and then began the practice of law. He entered politics early in his carer. Although interested in politics he did not desert the law and soon became known as one of the foremost criminal lawyers of the state. He was a participant in many of the leading legal battles in Georgia before he ever became a candidate for public office.

Started R. F. D. Service.

Watson served as a member of the house of representatives of Georgia in 1882-88, and was a democratic elector from the state-at-large in 1888. He entered the race for congress from the tenth Georgia district in 1890 and was elected, serving in 1891. He was elected as a democrat but joined the populist party and later became one of the foremost leaders of that party. While serving in congress he obtained the first appropriation ever made by that body for rural free delivery mail service. Watson was a candidate for reelection in 1892 and 1894, and the claim was made that he won both battles but his opponent was given the certificate.

At the national convention of the populist party held at St. Louis in 1896 Watson was named as a candidate for vice president; William Jennings Bryan receiving the nomination for the presidency on that ticket, Bryan also being the democratic nominee. In the late 90's he came to Atlanta and established a populist newspaper. In 1904 he was nominated by the populist party for the presidency and he made an active campaign in this race.

Noted As Publisher.

In 1905 Watson established Tom Watson's magazine in New York and after running this for a brief period he established the Jeffersonian, publishing this paper until 1916 when the post office department withdrew its mailing privilege because of attacks on President Wilson. He then purchased the Columbia Sentinel, which he published until his death. For many years Watson was an outspoken opponent of political activities of the Roman Catholic church and he published a book entitled "The Roman Catholic Hierarchy," which caused his prosecution in the federal courts. He was acquitted on these charges.

Among the most famous books written by Senator Watson are "The Story of France," "The Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Life and Times of Andrew Jackson," "The Life of Napoleon Bonaparte," his "History of France" being pronounced one of the greatest works of its kind ever written and being adopted in the schools of France as a text book.

Last Victory Greatest.

After the world war Senator Watson became one of the strongest opponents of the league of nations. In support of this opposition he entered the presidential primary in Georgia and led the ticket in a three-cornered fight for the Georgia delegation. He later entered the senatorial race against Senator Hoke Smith and Governor H. M. Dorsey and was elected. He took his seat in the senate March 4, 1921. His last campaign was the most decisive victory in his long political career.

WHEN NATURE WON'T PLUTO WILL

Came Home To Die

"Three years ago I came home thinking 2 or 3 weeks would be my limit to live. I had suffered for 15 years from colic attacks and severe liver and stomach trouble. I happened to see an advertisement of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and purchased a bottle at the drug store and after taking the first dose I felt better than I had for 15 years. I am now in the best of health—thanks to Mayr's Wonderful Remedy." It removes the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal tract, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded at Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere. —(adv.)

Strong, Powerful Yet Safe, Surgeons' Prescription Called Moone's Emerald Oil, Has Astonished Physicians.

There is one simple and inexpensive way to reduce dangerous, swollen veins and bunches, and get them down to normal, and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning. People who have painful, enlarged veins should not neglect them for they sometimes burst and cause much misery and loss of time.

Moone's Emerald Oil, besides being so marvelously antiseptic that it at once destroys germs and poisons caused by germs, is such a remarkable healing agent that eczema, barbers' itch, salt rheum and other inflammatory skin eruptions go in a few days. Piles are quickly absorbed and even goitres, wens and enlarged glands are dissolved.

For years it has been used in hospitals for boils, carbuncles, ulcers, abscesses and open sores, and with the most perfect success. With each original bottle which any pharmacist can supply you, is a folder that gives instructions for use in all of the above distressing complaints.

Your druggist will be glad to supply you.—adv.

FRELINGHUYSEN IS AHEAD IN PRIMARY

Newark, N. J., September 26.—United States Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen took an early lead in the fight for the republican senatorial nomination in the New Jersey primaries today, heading George L. Record by wide margins in all counties which have made reports with the exception of Mercer.

In 138 districts Senator Frelinghuysen, who is one of President Harding's closest friends, had a lead of almost two to one. The vote was: Frelinghuysen, 5,978; Record, 2,683.

He appeared to be leading in Jersey City, Record's hometown, by about 3 to 1 and had a 2 to 1 lead in Raritan, his own hometown. Trenton, Mercer county's largest city, apparently was safe for Record.

Frelinghuysen increased his lead steadily. Shortly after 11 o'clock he was ahead in every one of the 18 counties which had reported. He had overcome Record's early lead in Mercer county and went out in front by 16 votes in 25 districts which had reported.

Returns from 327 out of 2,464 districts in the state gave Frelinghuysen 16,682 and Record 7,305.

Ranking officers of the American Legion in four of the five states covered by the fifth district of the United States Veterans bureau at a meeting here today with officials of the southern division American Red Cross, pledged their support to the Red Cross during its annual roll call November 11-30, and heartily indorsed the work of the organization in a resolution which will be presented for passage at the national legion convention in New Orleans next month.

Legion officials here for the meeting, which was held at Red Cross headquarters, were Robert Denny, Greensboro, N. C., department of North Carolina adjutant; Luther K. Bryce, Spartanburg, S. C., department of South Carolina, commander; Fred W. Graham, Greenville, S. C., state service officer; Guy May, Knoxville, Tenn., department of Tennessee adjutant; Rodney S. Sohn, Augusta, Ga., department of Georgia commander; Spencer L. Hart, Augusta, Ga., department of Georgia adjutant, and Joe Sparks, Atlanta, legion liaison officer with the Fifth District Veterans' bureau. Harry L. Hopkins, manager of the southern division of the American Red Cross, presided at the meeting.

Activities of various departments of the Red Cross in the southern division in its 263 active chapters were outlined for the legion officers by the general department heads. Joseph L. Logan, assistant manager, told them that more than $300,000 had been spent in the southern division, comprising the eight states of Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, North and South Carolina, on disaster work in connection with the Mississinpi river flood and work among disabled exservice men in hospitals and their families, in the last year.

Dazzling Beauty Girls and Gowns At Fashion Show

Scottish Rite Benefit at the Auditorium Is Revelation of Brilliance.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

When Cinderella felt the first touch of the fairy's magic wand she must have had feelings like those of a thousand or more women at the auditorium Tuesday night when they gasped in amazement at the myriads of shimmering gowns displayed here for the first time at the 1922 fall fashion reveu. A veritable fairyland of riotous colors enveloping bevies of radiantly beautiful girls held a vast crowd entranced for two hours in what was pronounced to be the most novel and unique fashion show ever produced in Atlanta.

The revue will be repeated Wednesday night.

Under the auspices of the woman's auxiliary of the Scottish Rite hospital for crippled children the revue was staged by J. P. Allen & Co., under the direction of James. C. LaViere with musical settings combined to offer displays of stylish clothes for women which were the last word of fashion's arbiters.

Feast of Beauty.

Seemingly the brightest spots of Newport, Mayfair and Longchamps were culled of their most most splendid creations for presentation before thousands of admiring eyes in Atlanta. It must have been an eye feast indeed to the lovers of the beautiful and it was surely a revelation to the large crowd at the auditorium Tuesday night.

No more brilliant and dazzling spectacle of its kind has ever been seen before in Atlanta. No pains were spared to show the Atlanta public every conceivable type of the very latest gowns. The gamut of styles was run from the most extreme creation in evening dress to the chic and swaggerish sport costumes. For hours a seemingly endless line of graceful girls passed in review before the audience on a long runaway extending along the center aisle and for two hours the crowd gazed enthralled at the opulent scene of splendor.

Primarily the show was staged to reveal to Atlanta women the latest and newest sytles at a time when these styles are going through some revolutionary changes; but it did more than this. It brought to Atlanta women thousands of new ideas in dress and instilled in their minds innumerable hints which will enable them to maintain Atlanta's reputation for having the best-dressed women in the entire south.

One Hundred Treats.

If there is anything on earth more pleasing than a pretty woman beautifully dressed it surely must be a hundred pretty women clothed in the masterpieces of the ablest designers in the world, and this was one of the chief truisms demonstrated Tuesday night.

Somewhere around half a hundred of Atlanta's most attractive society girls appeared as mannikins and fairly beamed vivacity and happiness as with sparkling eyes and graceful steps they moved in slow procession before admiring eyes radiating joy and brightness. Even superlatives fail to describe the brilliant beauty of this perfect fashion revue and only a visit to the show will serve to give a hint of its colorful glory.

The program is arranged in three acts. The first act opened with Miss Blanche Divine appearing as "An Old-Fashioned Girl" and then followed the modern girls displaying the latest word in afternoon gowns, hats and footwear. Then followed a Greek veil dance gracefully presented by Miss Marian Dabney, Virginia Dabney and Gertrude Kelley, of the Spiker players.

Dance New Waltz.

In act two a ballroom scene was offered with the mannikins displaying evening gowns, wraps and footwear. Miss Sarah Orme appeared in the center of the ballroom as a bride preceded by Miss Jacquilin Moore as a flower girl. Arthur Murray and Miss Margaret Bryan then offered the new waltz which proved to be a pretty and attractive number. A display of evening wraps by the mennikins followed.

The third act served to introduce a stage setting of rare beauty, created by the Atlanta Scenic company, showing the ocean in the background with an ocean liner steaming across a harbor. In this act the mannikins appeared in displays of sport costumes, which drew liberal applause from the spectators, particularly the bathing costumes worn by Misses Christine McEachern, Jennie Johnson, Marion Smith and Vincencia Allen.

Brilliant Audience.

All of the fashions were not on the stage by any means, as the crowd was a brilliant assembly, rivaling the grand opera season in style.

The J. P. Allen company furnished the gowns and costumes worn during the evening. No estimate was made as to the cost of the numerous creations shown, but the aggregate must have run into many thousands of dollars.

Young Atlanta women serving as mannikins were as follows:

Lyrics, Humor and Tune Makes Iolanthe Pleasing

While "Iolanthe," presented last night at the Atlanta theater, contains perhaps less of the broad, laugh-provoking, farcical situations than others of the charming Gilbert and Sullivan operas to which Atlanta is being treated this week, and has fewer of those tunes which have been familiar to many of us since childhood, the large audience found that the production gave its full measure of enjoyment through the unusual cleverness of the lyrics, its irresistible humor and the general tunefullness of the score as a whole.

DeWolf Hopper as the chancellor was—well, DeWolf Hopper. And it is not diminishing his glory to say that the rest of the cast of stars filled their roles just as acceptably. Furthermore Miss Bernice Mershon, as queen of the fairies, was permitted to display a beauty obscured Monday night by her role of Katiska.

A Fairy Story.

The story centers around "Iolanthe," the fairy banished from her kingdom for marrying a mortal. The curtain rises on a scene laid 25 years later when, after an opening chorus all her sister nymphs pplead for forgiveness, and the queen of the fairies, played by Miss Bernice Mershon, succumbs to the wishes of her subjects. Miss Winifred Anglin, in the role of Iolanthe, played a prominent part in the success of the presentation.

There are no popular songs taken in whole from Iolanthe, yet in every one of the tuneful melodies there is a hint of some song that has occupied a preferred position in the public fancy. The chorus of 20 fairies, together with the peers on the opposite literally "brought down the house" in a number of songs.

Hopper Is Pleasing.

Mr. Hopper in the role of the lord chancellor more than maintained the esteem in which the audience again placed him and which has been his in Atlanta and wherever he has played for a generation. In the role, he occupies the unique position of presiding over the court which must decide whom Phyllis, who provides the love theme, must marry. In addition to two peers, and Strephon, the son of Iolanthe, the lord chancellor finds that he, himself, is in love with his beautiful and accomplished ward.

His satire permanently rouses the risibilities of the audience, and there is the invitation to smile with him; or rather at him, even in the denouement in which it develops that he is the husband of Iolanthe and the father of Strephon. His principal song, "Says I to Myself, Says I," demanded several encores.

In the intermission between the two acts, in expressing his appreciation of the character he is portraying, Mr. Hopper describes the chancellor as "the corrosive sublimate of Ego."

Whole Cast Stars.

Arthur Cunningham, as the Earl of Mountararat, and Henry Kelly, as the Earl of Tolloller, came in for their share of the applause which met the songs and witty scenes in which they took part. One of the most pleasing voices in the cast, however, was that of Herbert Waterous, as Private Willis, of the grenadier guards, who rendered several bass selections.

Miss Alice Mackenzie, as Phyllis, made a distinct hit, being possessed of a most pleasing voice.

Unfortunately, Mr. Hopper's repertoire does not include a second presentation of "Iolanthe" in Atlanta during this engagement, hence many Atlantans will miss a real treat in lyrics. But, if in the presentation of the remaining selections this week, the standard of last night's performance does not decline, and if merit counts, the S. R. O. sign should be hung outside the window long before each performance begins.

"The Mikado," which scored a tremendous success the opening night, will be repeated in matinee today and "Pinafore" will be sung tonight.

—WALTER CHAMBERS.

CABINET CURTAILS OCEAN DRY FORCES

Washington, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Curtailment of the activities of American prohibition enforcement officers on the high seas was decided upon today by President Harding and his cabinet.

Search of foreign vessels for contraband liquor outside the international three-mile limit may be made hereafter, it was stated authoritatively, on in the event that the vessels actually establish communication with American shores by means of their own crews or small boats. Search under such circumstances was upheld recently by Federa. District Judge Morton, at Boston, in the case of the British schooner Grace and Ruby. An appeal in that case has been taken to the supreme court and it was stated a decision would be hastened.

Foreign vessels outside the three-mile limit unloading their cargoes of contraband rum onto craft from American shores would not come within the federal law, in the view of high administration officials. The American craft undertaking to land the contraband, however, would be subject to search and seizure.

Flying Ensign's Body Will Reach City Today; Funeral to Be Thursday

Meager details reaching Atlanta of the death of Ensign Archibald Orme Harrington, formerly of this city, are to the effect that he was killed Monday morning in an airplane accident at the naval flying station, Pensacola, Fla. His body will arrive in Atlanta some time Wednesday, and his funeral will be held from the All Saint's church Thursday at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Douglas, of the All Saint's church, officiating. Interment in the family plot in Oakland cemetery.

Ensign Harrington was formerly of Atlanta, being the son of W. H. and Janie Harrington, of West Point and Atlanta. He graduated from Annapolis with the 1918 class, and up until June of this year when he was transferred to the naval flying corps, was with the Pacific fleet. News of his death reached Atlanta in the form of a telegram from the commander of the flying station in Florida.

Surviving relatives are four brothers, John M. Harrington, of New York; Frank Harrington, of New York; Alfred Harrington, of West Point, and William Harrington, of California; one aunt, Mrs. Joseph T. Orme, of Atlanta; one uncle, J. T. Orme, of Atlanta; one grand-uncle, Dr. Frank Orme.

Ensign Harrington was popular with a large circle of friends in Atlanta. His relatives in this city are some of the most prominent families. His mother, before her marriage, was Miss Janie Orme.

Hughes Approves Allied Proposals Made to Turkey

Washington, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—The unequivocal approval by the Washington government of allied proposals to insure freedom of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, and also to protect racial and religious minorities in Turkish territories involved in the present Near Eastern situation, was expressed by Secretary Hughes today in reply to an inquiry addressed to him by the Associated Press.

The question submitted sought to ascertain "the attitude of the government of the United States toward the proposals made by the allies to the Turkish nationalist authorities." Mr. Hughes declined to comment on the territorial questions raised, but made clear the attitude of the administration on the other points involved.

"The American government is gratified," said Mr. Hughes, "to observe that the proposal of the three allied governments seeks to insure effectively 'the liberty of the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora and the Bosphorus, as well as protection of racial and religious minorities.' These points of the proposal are clearly in accord with American sentiment.

"This government also trusts that suitable arrangements may be agreed upon in the interest of peace to preserve the freedom of the straits pending the conference to conclude a final treaty of peace between Turkey, Greece and the allies."

Oyster Bed Contract.

Savannah, Ga., September 26.—J. W. Fitzgerald, a local contractor, was the lowest bidder today for raising the oyster bed training wall at the entrance to the Savannah harbor. His bid was $378,280. There were several other bidders from Savannah and also bidders from Macon and Jacksonville.

Is 'Yeomen' Best Of Week's Opera? Jones Says Yes

Gilbert and Sullivan Themselves Thought "Yeomen of the Guard" Finest Work.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

When the coming of DeWolf Hopper in Gilbert & Sullivan opera was announced, heavy figuring immediately began to see just how many of the delightful, whimsical, musical, entrancing presentations each member of the staff of this morning newspaper could witness.

Unfortunately a newspaper simply will not publish itself, no matter how compelling the outside urge may be to draw away from its jealous demands the aforementioned staff.

Personally, after intense concentration, I found it would be possible to get away from the shears and pastepot of the desk for two nights during the week. Then came the job of picking the nights.

It didn't take me long to decide. Thursday and Friday nights it would be, without argument.

Favorite of Authors.

Thursday night is "The Pirates." The reason for seeing that is that I know it best and consider it the cleverest in its satire and the most delightful in its music of them all.

Friday night is "The Yoemen of the Guard." And Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan themselves, who wrote and composed it, considered that the best of their works. And they ought to be good judges.

Then, yesterday afternoon, I talked for an hour with DeWolf Hopper. And I found out that he likes "The Yoemen" best, also. He considers his role of Jack Point, the ragged, heartbroken court jester, offers the greatest opportunity of his career to prove that the greatest of comedy is always near the borderland of tears.

I have heard "The Yoemen" sung and I never expect to miss an opportunity of hearing it again.

Completely Human.

The music is Sullivan at his loveliest. The lyrics are Gilbert at his cleverest and the story—the plot—is Gilbert outlining a sketch in humanity, laughter and sorrow that makes the whole production as near to grand opera as the great partnership ever came.

Somehow, I'm afraid Atlanta is going to miss, in large degree, the great opportunity that Friday night is bringing. I'm afraid that public unfamiliarity with "The Yoemen" will keep many away from the theater who ought to be there. And I'm terribly anxious for every lover of opera to be there.

If desire purchased tickets, I'd buy out the house for a handpicked audience. That's just how I feel about it.

Yes, I'll admit every nice thing anyone says about the rest of the productions, about "Mikado," "Pinafore," "Iolanthe" and "The Pirates," and I'll probably outdo the best that can be said, in my mind, but—and underscore this in your mind—I'd miss 'em all before I missed "The Yoemen" and DeWolf as Jack Point.

REPORT MORE GIFTS FOR ELKS' MEETING

A number of small reports received at convention headquarters Tuesday brought the Elks' 1923 convention fund several hundred dollars. There is still a considerable portion of workers who Tuesday had not made returns to Secretary B. C. Broyles, and these he requested to get in touch with him without delay.

Plans were perfected by the officials of the convention board Tuesday evening for getting new men into the field to round up remaining subscriptions and to give every person in the city who is genuinely interested in upholding Atlanta's reputation at the forthcoming gathering an opportunity to contribute.

At the same time the balance of the convention fund is being raised, the selective membership committee is redoubling its efforts to raise the membership of the lodge to 5,000 by the time of the convention in July.

The membership committee meets at the Elks home on East Ellis street Wednesday at 12:30 for the regular midweekly luncheon, and at that time Chairman R. M. Eubanks and the members of his committee will take steps to speed up the drive even above its present pace.

At the last meeting of the lodge fifty-one new members were elected to membership, and these will receive their initiation on Thursday evening. It is understood that a class of applicants as large or larger will be presented to the lodge at that time for election to membership.

A "copyright law" very similar to the civilized nations of the world, existed among the primitive Indians of north British Columbia and Alaska.

Entire oil supply of this country will not last more than 20 to 25 years, says George Otis Smith, director of the Geological Survey.

"Mikado" and "Pinafore."

(At Atlanta Theater.)

Whether it is the collective excellence of his company, or the man's own overpowering magnetism of comedy, or both, or whether it is this combined with appreciation of the ripeness of the time for an introduction of the high ideals of the stage and general perfection of presentation—whatever is the happy combination, true it is that the engagement of De Wolf Hopper and his players at the Atlanta theater this week will go down in memory as one of the finest episodes in local theatrical annals. At the matinees today, the opening night's triumph, "The Mikado," will be repeated. Tonight the bill announced is "Pianafore." This opera strikes a slightly more popular note than either of those thus far produced. It is filled with tunes that have stuck in memory for years, and in other intimate ways has laid claim to a permanent place in memory and affection. Mr. Hopper's Dick Deadeye is known as a masterpiece. Thursday night will witness the only presentation of "The Pirates of Penzance;" Friday night "The Yeomen of the Guard" will be the bill, and the engagement will be brought to a close on Saturday with a matinee performance of "Pinafore" and a night performance of "The Mikado."

"East Is West."

(At the Forsyth.)

"East Is West," is a stage classic. It will probably be sometime before another play of the same type is written and equals its record. It is beyond any question one of the greatest offerings that any stock company could produce and the Forsyth players are among the first in the United States to present it and the manner in which they are doing it would do credit to the original New York company.

Florence Rittenhouse, the new leading lady, proves herself an artist of the first water and has won Atlanta without a struggle. Litel as usual is good, and Gus Forbes is great. The entire company could not be improved on in their presentation of "East Is West." Each one fits into the part assigned.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Lyric.)

Keith's Lyric is offering this week Eddie Ross and his one-and-only African harp, a combination that has made loud guffaws of sturdy merriment roll round and round the globe like some impossible tidal wave, featuring a bill that is also excellent otherwise. The monologue of Eddie, accompanied by the strained notes of his instrument, is the chief motif of the bill, but these are also helping: Margaret Ford, the dual-voiced singer; McCarton and Morrore, with Parisian Apache dances; Pat and Jules Levolo, who seem safer on a wire than most pedestrians on a rural lane; Maker and Redford in "College Chums," funny stuff.

Loew Vaudeville.

(At the Grand.)

Dorothy Dodd, the former southern girl, who is delighting audiences at Loew's Grand theater, with her clever singing of syncopated songs, closes her engagement with tonight's performances. Miss Dodd has an accomplished assistant in Miss Nellie Nelson, who entertains at the piano.

Bud Heim and the Lockwood Sisters is another offering that carries comedy as their chief method of furnishing amusement. Bud Heim is a natural comedian, his ability to create laughs seems to be born in him and every show finds Loew patrons calling for more of his comedy. The Lockwood Sisters are both splendid in special songs and dances.

Other acts that please are Arthur Jarrett and company in a humorous one act playlet in three scenes "Cupids Close-ups." Ed Hill, cartoonist and Joe Fanton and company, sensational acrobats.

"Manslaughter."

(At the Howard.)

There are only three or four Cecil B. DeMille productions a year, and you know they're the high points of the season. The Howard theater is showing Mr. DeMille's latest production, "Manslaughter," from the story by Alice Duer Miller. Jeanie Macpherson wrote the scenario.

The cast is a knockout. Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy and Lois Wilson head it. It is probably the most stirring and human story Mr. DeMille has ever visualized on the screen. And it isn't lacking in spectacle, either.

"The Eternal Flame."

(At the Metropolitan.)

The placing of a wager on the fidelity of a wife is the pivotal point around which revolves the highly dramatic plot of "The Eternal Flame," the first national attraction in which Norma Talmadge is starring at the Metropolitan theater this week.

The incident took place during the gay second restoration period in France at the Inn of the Silver Crescent, where a dozen young aristocrats, returned from the hunt, were dining. The Duc de Langeais had just received orders to take command of an important military division in the south of France and as the pretty serving girl whom he had surprised and kissed disappeared with the men laughing at her discomfiture, the Marquis de Ronquerolles rose unsteadily to his feet to toast the Duc as the bravest man in France because he was leaving without protection the most beautiful wife in Paris.

"In the Name of the Law."

(At the Rialto.)

Ralph Lewis, who appears as Policeman O'Hara in Emory Johnson's police drama "In the Name of the Law" showing at the Rialto theater this week, is known to thousands of photoplay fans the country over. Mr. Lewis has played many notable roles, among them a principal character in D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." His role in "In the Name of the Law" is one of the best in which he has ever appeared, according to Mr. Lewis himself.

Mr. Lewis portrays the role of a policeman and the story has to do with the life of a cop, at work and at home.

"Puppy Love," a new Sunshine comedy, the latest International News and music by the Rialto Melody artists are additional features.

Movie Men Hosts To Carter DeHaven, Comedian of Films

Carter DeHaven, well-known motion picture comedian, was the honor guest Monday at a luncheon in the pine room of the Ansley hotel given by the local F. B. O. exchange. About 25 moving picture distributors and exhibitors and newspapermen were present.

Mr. DeHaven, who is making a tour to get in touch with exhibitors showing his pictures, left for New Orleans Monday evening.

WANTS PROSECUTION OF WAR PROFITEERS

Terre Haute, Ind., September 26.—Alvin M. Owsley, national director of the Americanism commission of the American legion, in an address today before the Indiana department of the ligion declared that he hoped the national convention which will meet in New Orleans October 16 will demand the prosecution of war and post-war profiteers through whom he asserted the government had lost millions of dollars.

Declaring that of 150,000 war contracts only 17,000 had been audited he quoted evidence in the department of justice to show that of $40,000,000,000 owing to the government, only $15,000,000,000 had been collected. The other, 133,000 contracts have not yet, after four years, been audited.

Quoting from figures obtained in the American legion investigation of profiteering, he said:

"When in the year 1919, 46,000,000,000 pounds of sugar was sold by the government at a trifle over 8 cents a pound resulting in a loss of more than $2,000,000 to the American taxpayer, in what manner was this winning the war?"

Continuing, Mr. Owsley cited the following evidence from official records at Washington:

"A well known powder plant which cost, it has been estimated, $143,000,000 was sold for $3,500,000.

"For 86,000 saddle horses in the army, 945,000 saddles were bought—not quite eleven saddles for each horse.

"The government paid $1,051,511,000 for airplanes that never reached the front.

"The war department sold 5,630,466 pounds of roast beef which cost 43.8 cents a pound for 1.6 cents, the government standing a loss of $2,392,948.05.

"While one private soldier in the service of his country served over a year in the penitentiary for the theft of a single can of beans—governmem beans, mind you—men who defrauded the government of millions of dollars in that great national crisis still walk our streets in liberty and prosperity. This is a condition the American legion no longer will tolerate."

EMORY UNIVER. WILL ENROLL 900 MEN THIS TERM

Nearly 900 students will be enrolled at Emory university when the fall session begins Wednesday, according to official estimates given out Tuesday. The freshman class will number close to 260 students, as compared with 205 last year. The three dormitories on the campus have already been filled, and arrangements are being made to house the students in Decatur and Atlanta. Many applications are being refused because of lack of classroom space, it was stated.

Registrations were begun Monday morning. Old students arriving are greeted by a number of new instructors. Both the student body and the faculty are very optimistic over the outlook for the 1922-23 session, and expect it to prove one of the best in the history of the institution so far.

Motor Club Officer Announces Traffic Meeting for Friday

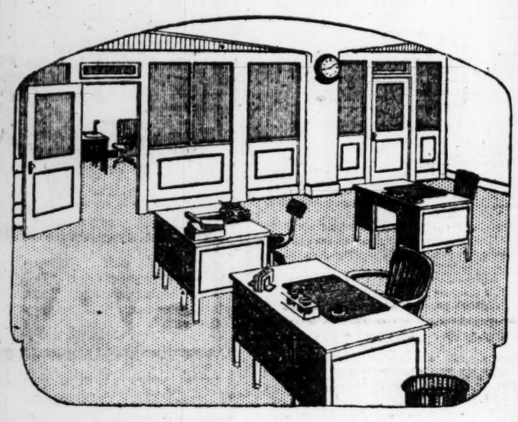
Definite plans for relieving unsatisfactory traffic conditions in Atlanta will be adopted at a meeting at the Ansley hotel Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock, according to announcement from officials of the Atlanta Motor club Tuesday.

A body of merchants, representatives of the Georgia Railway & Power company, members of the Atlanta Motor club and others interested in the problems to be considered will attend the meeting, and it is stated that those included in the gathering are determined that some definite steps be outlined whereby the heavy traffic in Atlanta can be handled with satisfaction to all concerned.

"I feel that the Atlanta Motor club is the leader in this movement," said W. G. Peebles, secretary of the Atlanta Motor club, "as we have already secured through the co-operation of the police commission and the city council a number of improvements which are worth mentioning."

Armstrong's Linoleum

for Every Floor in the House



A quiet floor
A clean floor
A permanent floor

And some other advantages of the linoleum floor

IT is not surprising that this modern office of The Cadillac Company of Atlanta should be equipped with floors of Armstrong's Linoleum.

When the subject of floors is considered thoughtfully, modern linoleum offers so many advantages that it has become the logical choice.

The qualities any business floor should have are permanence, good looks, quietness, restfulness to the tread, and economy of upkeep.

Linoleum floors can be cleaned thoroughly, more quickly and with less effort than almost any other type of floor. The linoleum floor never needs refinishing; an occasional waxing and polishing is all the care it demands.

There is a pleasant variety of plain colors and pattern effects in the Armstrong Linoleum line that offers even the most staid business an opportunity to combine individuality in floors with conservatism in appointments.

Your architect, contractor, or any good linoleum merchant can give you more extended information on the qualities of linoleum mentioned here. If you are interested in floors for any type of business or public building or shop, write us for free booklet, "Business Floors." We gladly furnish data and specifications for laying linoleum over concrete or wood.

Clearing Debris From Fire Area; Origin Unknown

With the fire caused by Saturday night's million dollar conflagration hardly cooled, workmen started to work Tuesday to clear away the debris.

Business houses in the block, including the Woolworth 5 and 10-cent store, were opened for business Tuesday mornnig. The L. F. M. store and the Eiseman company employed workmen to remove damaged stock, and to clear away debris caused by fire on the top floors. Workmen at the Childs hotel are preparing that part of the house not damaged for occupancy.

All efforts to determine the origin of the fire have failed, those who have made minute investigations say. Inspectors from the fire department have been on the scene of the blaze ever since Monday morning, but report their failure to locate the exact point where the fire started.

BURGLARS BUSY MONDAY NIGHT, POLICE ARE TOLD

A number of minor burglaries were reported to the police Tuesday, following the activities of second story men late Monday night.

R. N. Fickett, of Gaston avenue, reported the loss of $65 in cash and a valuable watch.

Several ladies' dresses and men's apparel were stolen from the home of G. A. Jossey, 401 East North avenue, and L. D. Lacey told the police burglars carried away a shaving outfit and a handbag full of clothes from his residence at 550 Whitehall street.

Three diamond rings and $20 in cash were taken from the home of W. E. Hancock, of Briarcliff road, and jewelry valued at several hundred dollars was taken from the home of Mrs. W. R. Dougherty, 123 Lawton stret.

WOMAN FUGITIVE FROM JAIL WORE PISTOL ON BELT

Bessie Hightower, negress, who escaped from the Fulton county tower two weeks ago, was recaptured Tuesday by Deputy Sheriff R. C. McCall, who was assigned to the case after the prisoner made her getaway. Since her escape she has carried a large caliber pistol strapped to her waist. She is under sentence of ten to twenty years in prison on a charge of manslaughter. She killed another negress. She will be taken to the state farm today.

PASSENGERS IN WRECK REPORTED IMPROVED

Mrs. Lena Robinson, 33 years of age, who resides at 200 West Alexander street and who was injured in an automobile accident on Luckie street was Tuesday recovering from bruises and scratches sustained in the accident. She was a passenger, Monday night, in a jitney bus en route to her home at the time the Ralph Boatwright, also hurt in the crash, who is an employee of a business establishment owned by Mrs. Robinson, was resting easily despite a broken leg, it was added. Frank Kelly, the driver of the jitney, received only slight injuries.

SUTTON SPEAKS TO MASS MEETING AT COLLEGE PARK

Professor W. A. Sutton, superintendent of the Atlanta public schools, was the principal speaker at a mass meeting of the citizens of College Park Tuesday night, Professor Sutton discussed the proposed referendum which will determine whether the present system of nomination to positions on the College Park school board be continued or whether the system be changed in favor of election by the people. The referendum will take place September 30.

Professor Sutton, in his discussion, expressed the opinion that his lack of information concerning the exact conditions which apply in College Park left him unable to express a belief as to whether or not that system should be adopted there. He pointed out that the conditions locally would have to be considered in arriving at a decision regarding the relative merits of the old system and the new one proposed to be decided September 30.

Members of both factions, those opposing change of the old system and those in favor of electing the members by the people, received Professor Sutton's address in fine spirits, it was stated.

DROUTH AND DUST TO STAY A WHILE, PROPHET STATES

Atlantans who viewed the threatening clouds Tuesday with relief and hoped that the dry spell was at last to end were disappointed through the clearing up which took place in the afternoon, and with the announcement from the local weather office that the outlook for rain is still unfavorable, it is expected that dust and drouth will continue for several days. An area of high pressure over the New England section, according to C. F. von Herrman, local meteorologist, accounted for the threatening weather Tuesday.

Tuesday night was moderately cooler, with the temperature hovering around 60 degrees, and it was stated at the weather office that September so far had averaged about three degrees per day higher than the normal temperature for this month. Precipitation totaled 1.16 inches, with a record of no rain since September 11. Indications are that the month will be below normal for rain and above normal for temperature, as the normal precipitation is 3.53 inches for the month.

KNIGHTS COLUMBUS TO MARK NAME DAY

"Columbus day," October 12, will be celebrated by the Atlanta council, Knights of Columbus, at a banquet at the Capital City club, it was announced Tuesday by M. C. Carroll, grand knight of the local council. Mr. Carroll states that the council will have a number of prominent local men on the program for addresses that night, and that Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, has been invited to attend and make a speech.

Dancing will be enjoyed after the banquet, and a thoroughly good time is expected for all who attend.

Bad Auto Smash Injures Daughter Of Judge Russell

Four Others Hurt When Machine Turns Turtle on Sharp Curve.

Hawkinsville, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—An automobile party had a miraculous escape from instant death last night while returning from a show at Macon. Upon reaching a sharp curve on the Dixie short route turned over and pinned some of the occupants under the car, other cars following immediately coming to their assistance.

Miss Russell, daughter of Judge Dick Russell, of Winder, suffered a broken arm and other injuries, and Miss Grace Parker, of Millen, Ga., was severely bruised about the face and body. Professor Wright, of Cochran, was badly bruised and lacerated in four or five places. Howell Mullis and Harvey Asbel, of Cochran, escaped with only a shakeup.

Medical aid from Hawkinsville was rushed to the injured, who were taken on to Cochran. A number of people from Hawkinsville and Cochran had gone up to Macon to atend a show and all were returning home in several cars about the same time. The car was almost demolished.

Injured Patrolman Sues Power Company For $50,000 Damages

Roy Cook, formerly a motorcycle policeman of the East Point police department, filed suit for $50,000 damages against the Georgia Railway and Power company in Fulton superior court Tuesday.

Cook alleges that on September 9, while he was chasing a speeding automobile from East Point towards Atlanta, he was run down by an automobile service truck belonging to the Georgia Railway and Power company, and as a result of the accident had to have his right leg amputated.

NAMING SENATOR WILL BE DELAYED

state convention at Macon to select a democratic nominee for the position of senator but there is doubt as to what action the convention will take. The convention may go ahead and select a nominee or it may adopt rules which will let the bars down and permit any democratic candidate to run for the place in the general election.

Meeting Postponed.

Several close friends of Clifford Walker, nominee for governor, had assembled in Atlanta Tuesday morning to discuss plans for the convention when they heard the news of the death of Senator Watson. At the suggestion of Mr. Walker, no action of any kind was taken. The meeting had been called several days ago and several of the Walker leaders, including Mr. Walker himself, were in Atlanta Tuesday morning when the news of the death of the senator was received.

"Details of the convention in Macon can wait until later," Mr. Walker said on his arrival from Rome. Mr. Walker sent the following telegram to Mrs. Watson at Thomson.

"I am deeply shocked and sincerely grieved over the untimely death of your husband. His distinguished character and his illustrious career both as a writer and as a statesman have profoundly impressed and influenced his age, and his going away is the loss of a great leader. My deepest condolence is extended to you in this dark hour of your greatest bereavement.

"CLIFFORD E. WALKER."

Among the Walker leaders who were in Atlanta to attend the conference were the following:

Ogden Persons, of Forsyth; H. H. Dean, of Gainesville; J. H. Dozier, of Athens; Judge G. H. Howard and Edgar Alexander, of Atlanta; E. M. Owen, of Zebulon; Colonel J. C. Simmons, of Lawrenceville; Judge Newt Morris, of Marietta; J. B. Daniel, of LaGrange, and State Senator-elect J. S. Cowart, of Arlington.

Law in Case.

In 1918 the Georgia legislature passed a law covering the appointment of a successor to a United States senator who resigned or died, which was approved August 16 of that year. The law reads as follows:

"Be it enacted that in every case where a vacancy shall occur by death, resignation or otherwise, the governor of the state shall make temporary appointment of a senator to serve until the people fill the vacancy by election as herein prescribed.

"And the governor, in the event of a vacancy, shall by proclamation order a special election to be held to fill such vacancy upon the date of the next regular election to be held in the state of Georgia for the federal house of representatives.

"Be it further enacted, that in every case the person receiving the largest number of votes cast at said election for any person shall be declared the duly elected senator of the United States for the term aforesaid."

peared to be optimistic concerning the possibility of the future downtown development which may add a handsome structure to Atlanta's downtown business district.

He stated that he did not care to go into the matter of the probable cost of the building or the number of stories it will contain, but it was understood that the structure will be a handsome and substantial one in keeping with development in this section, which is rapidly forging to the front in values as actual construction of the Spring street viaduct nears.

I cut Strickland in the neck or in the back.

"I do remember trying to get out of the room after I was attacked by Strickland and I feared for my own life. It was then I obtained my pocket knife and acted solely in self-defense."

Cross-questioned by Attorney W. C. Byers, counsel for defense, Sellers was questioned regarding whether liquor was being sold in the house maintained by the Stricklands.

"When I moved into the Strickland home," Sellers replied, "I was informed by Mrs. Strickland that any time I wanted whisky to let her know and she would get it for me. At the time of the trouble in Strickland's room I had not been drinking."

Widow Takes Stand.

Mrs. Strickland, widow of the slain man, was placed on the stand by J. Walter LeCraw, assistant solicitor-general, and questioned as a rebuttal witness against evidence introduced by the defense that her husband had been under the influence of whisky for several days prior to the homicide. She vehemently denied that her husband had been drinking heavily for several days, or that he was intoxicated at the time of the trouble with the defendant.

Mrs. Strickland declared her husband had not absented himself from his work with the American Express company, and that he had performed his usual duties as callman the day before he was slain.

The widow of Strickland was attired in mourning and remained in the courtroom during the entire period of the trial. Sitting beside her was B. M. T. Strickland, of Wilsonville, Ala., father of the victim.

It was brought out at the trial that Strickland died from knife wounds about the throat which almost severed the jugular vein, at Grady hospital on the morning of July 5, after he had been found in an unconscious condition in his room by firemen from an engine house nearby following the disturbance which could be heard from the street.

Brother Tells Story.

G. W. Strickland, brother of the dead man, who was placed on the stand as the firset witness, testified that he was present when Sellers came to his brother's room on July 4.

"As he stepped into my brother's room," asserted G. W. Strickland, "Sellers asked if we had any liquor. My brother told him there was a small quantity in a pint bottle on the table and he would divide it with him.

"The dispute arose between my brother and Sellers when the latter expressed his displeasure at the small quantity of liquor in the bottle and acused by brother of 'trying to make a monkey of him.' Without giving my brother a chance to defend himself Sellers knocked him to the bed and stabbed him twice with a knife. My wife came into the room at this moment and witnessed the stabbing. She attempted to separate the two, but was pushed aside by Sellers."

Mrs. G. W. Strickland substantiated the testimony of her husband and related a story similar to his in practically every detail.

Established Fund For Aged Employees.

In a small way, in places where I had influence, as, for instance, in the administration of my court and in the Imperial Automobile club, I laid stress upon the social point of view. For instance, I caused a fund to be established, out of the tips paid for visiting palaces, which was destined solely to the benefit of the domestic staff, and which, in the course of time, reached a magnificent total. From this fund the domestics and their families received money for trips to bathing resorts, cost of taking cures, burial expenses, dowries for their children, confirmation expenses and similar payments.

When I, at the request of the newly founded Imperial Automobile club, took it under my protection, I accepted an invitation to a luncheon in the beautiful rooms of the clubhouse, built by Ihne. In addition to magnates like the Duke of Ratibor, the Duke of Ujest, etc., I found there a number of gentlemen from Berlin's high financial circles, some of whom behaved rather wildly. When the conversation turned to the subject of drivers, I suggested establishing a fund which, in case of accident, illness or death befalling these men, should provide means of livelihood for those whom they left behind. The suggestion met with unanimous approval, and the fund has had most excellent results. Later on I brought about the establishment of something similar for the skippers and pilots attached to the Imperial Yacht club at Kiel.

Special pleasure was afforded me be the Kaiser Wilhelm Children's home, founded by me at Ahlbeck, at which, in peace times, between May and the end of September in each year, a large number of children from the most poverty-stricken working people's districts in Berlin were accommodated in sucessive detachments, each lot staying four weeks. This home is still under the tried direction of the admirable superintendent, Miss Kirsevhner, daughter of the former chief burgomaster of Berlin, and it has achieved most brilliant results, both in the physical and psychical domain. Weakened, palse, needy children were transformed there into fleshy, blooming, happy little beings, concerning whose welfare I often joyfully convinced myself by personal visits.

For the very reason that I have spoken of my quarrel with Bismarck as a result of labor questions, I wish to add to what I have already said about his basic position in the matter—an example showing how brilliantly the prince behaved in something that concerned the workers. In this, to be sure, he was impelled by nationalistic motives, but he also realized at once that it was necessary to protect a large element against unemployment, which caused him to intervene with the full weight of his authority.

Some time around 1886, while I was still Prince Wilhelm, I had learned that the great Vulcan shipping concern at Stettin was confronted, owing to lack of orders, with bankruptcy, and its entire force of workmen, numbering many thousands, with starvation, which would mean a catastrophe for the city of Stettin. Only by an order for the building of a big ship could the Vulcan shipyard be saved.

Spurred on some time before by Admiral von Stosch, who wished to free us once and for all from the English ship builders, the Vulcan people had set to work courageously to build the first German armored ship, christened by my mother in 1847 on her birthday, on which occasion I was present. Ever since that time the warships built at the Vulcan yards had always satisfied naval experts—the concern, however, seldom built warships.

The Chancellor In Action.

The German merchant marine, on the other hand, had not dared to follow the path courageously blazed by Admiral von Stosch. And now the brave German shipyard company was faced with ruin, since the North German Lloyd had refused its offer to build a passenger steamer, alleging that the English, because of their years of shipbuilding traditions, could build it better. It was a serious emergency. I hastened to Prince Bismarck and laid before him the matter as I have described it above.

The chancellor was furious; his eyes flashed, his fist came crashing down on the table.

"What! Do you mean to say that these shopkeepers would rather have their boats built in England than in Germany? Why, that is unheard of. And is a good German shipyard to fail for such a reason? The devil take this gang of traders!"

He rang the bell and a servant entered.

"Have Privy Councillor X, come here immediately from the foreign office!"

In a few minutes—during which the prince stamped up and down the room—the man summoned appeared.

"Telegram to Hamburg, to our envoy—the Lloyd in Bremen is to have its new ship built by the Vulcan company in Stettin!"

The privy councilor vanished in hot haste, "with his coat-tails sticking straight out behind him." The prince turned to me, and said: "I am greatly obliged to you. You have done the fatherland, and also myself, an important service. Henceforth ships will be built only in our yards—I'll take care to make this clear to the Hanseatic crowd. You may telegraph to the Vulcan people that the chancellor will guarantee that the ship will be built in the Vulcan yards. May this be the first of a whole lot of such ships! As for the workers whom you have thus saved from unemployment, I hope that they will express their thanks to you!"

I passed on the news to Privy Councillor Schlutow at Stettin and great was the joy caused thereby. This was the first step upon the road destined to lead to the construction of the magnificent German express steamers.

When I went, after I had ascended the throne in 1888, to Stettin, in order to place honorary insignia on the flags of my Pomeranian grenadiers, I also visited the Vulcan shipyards, at the invitation of the directors. After my reception by the directors outside the yards, the great doors were flung open and I walked inside. But, instead of work and pounding hammers, I found deep silence. The entire body of workmen was standing in a half-circle, with bared heads; in the middle stood the oldest workman of all, a man with a snow-white beard, bearing a laurel wreath in his hand.

Is was deeply moved. Schlutow whispered to me: "A little pleasure for you, which the workmen themselves have thought up." The old workman stepped forward and, in pithy, plain words, expressed to me the gratitude of the workmen to me for having saved them, and, above all, their wives and children, from hardship and hunger, by my appeal to Bismarck about the building of the ship. As a token of their gratitude, he asked my permission to hand over the laurel wreath. Most deeply moved, I took the wreath and expressed my pleasure at receiving my first laurels, without the shedding of a drop of blood, from the hands of honest German workmen.

That was in the year 1888! In those days, the German laboring classes knew how to appreciate the blessing of labor.

Why Pretty Teeth

Are shown everywhere today

Look about you. Note how many teeth now glisten. Note how people show them as they never did before.

Millions of people are brushing teeth in a new way. If you don't know the good results, make this free test.

Fight dingy film

One object is to fight the film on teeth—that viscous film you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film.

No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats film. So, under old methods, beautiful teeth were seen less often than today.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Very few people escaped such troubles under old ways of teeth cleaning.

New ways found

Then dental science found two film combatants. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then dentists everywhere began to advise their use.

A new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research. The name is Pepsodent. In that tooth paste are embodied those two great film combatants.

Five effects

But Pepsodent brings five effects. These are very important. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to constantly neutralize the acids which cause decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Those are Nature's ever-present tooth-protecting agents. Every use of Pepsodent gives them manifold effect.

Pepsodent also polishes the teeth so film adheres less readily.

You see them now nearly the world over

These glistening teeth are now seen nearly the world over. Careful people of some fifty nations are now using Pepsodent. And those whiter teeth mean safer teeth. They mean a new dental era.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

This test will be a revelation, amazing but delightful. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

THOMAS E. WATSON.

While the passing of United States Senator Thomas E. Watson will be deplored by his thousands of friends and admirers in Georgia, and throughout the nation, the news of his death is not surprising to those who have kept in touch with his physical condition during the past year.

He had long suffered from asthma and the trouble was intensified by climatic conditions in his new home.

But even though the news of the death of Senator Watson may not have been altogether unexpected, it is a shock to the people of his home state, impressing political friends and opponents alike, with a sense of regret and sympathy.

Senator Watson's career was in many respects one of the most remarkable in the history of this state.

He was a man of unusual magnetism, of outstanding ability, and he possessed rare genius for leadership.

No man who has figured in the public affairs of Georgia, certainly within the last quarter of a century, ever enjoyed such a devoted personal following as that which Senator Watson maintained throughout the vicissitudes of his political career, and it was composed of men and women whose confidence he held by the sheer force of his remarkable personality.

His intellect was not always directed along constructive lines, but regardless of where he went, the rank and file of his following invariably went with him, and were always to be found standing in solid formation and ready to obey his command.

Essentially a fighter, he always fought his political battles fairly and in an open field, and by reason of his characteristic fairness in battle and his sportsmanlike gameness in defeat as well as in victory, he retained throughout his aggressive and, at times, turbulent career, the respect of his political foes—and his foes of today have been, time and again, his allies of tomorrow.

But, conspicuous as he was in political affairs, posterity will remember him as a scholar and historian long after the events with which he has been associated as a political leader are forgotten.

He was a self-educated Georgia boy; essentially a self-made man, and the author of several historical works, each of which will endure as a valuable contribution to American literature.

The fact that his "Story of France" is today in use as a textbook in the public schools of that country is evidence of his skill and fame as a historian.

Senator Watson possessed a rare diversity of talents and attainments, and, above all, he had the courage to exert them in behalf of principles which he believed right.

As a champion of the masses of the people, his name will live in history as that of a great Georgian, and as the most influential figure in the public life of his state in a generation.

The coal fact-finding bill is now a law and in operation. The next thing in order is to find the fact.

A prohibition director says the bootlegger "is a fast-vanishing species." Of course he is—and that is how he so often keeps from getting caught.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK.

As a part of an organized nation-wide campaign of education that is being conducted for the purpose of curtailing the enormous fire waste in this country, Fire Prevention Week will be observed in Atlanta, beginning next Monday.

The activities featuring the observance of the week will be conducted under the immediate official auspices of the Atlanta board of fire underwriters, which organization has made a meritorious appeal for co-operation and support on the part of all of our various institutions and the rank and file of Atlanta citizens.

Last year, according to fire insurance statistics, the fire loss of the United States amounted to upwards of $485,000,000. This was more than the cost of the Panama canal; more than the aggregate amount of the salaries paid to school superintendents and teachers in the whole country during 1921, and, by something like $32,000,000, more than the total cost of maintenance of the United States postal system for that year.

The figures quoted of course do not include the even greater economic loss—such as enforced forfeiture of contracts, loss of labor-time, loss of sales forces and clientele, etc.—the aggregate of which is so great, says a statement by the board of fire underwriters, "that none dares to figure it."

Neither does it include the vastly more deplorable human losses the country suffers each year as a result of destructive fires.

In 1921, for instance, approximately 15,000 human beings were killed and 16,000 were injured by fires in the United States, of which numbers, says the underwriters' statistics, "83 per cent were mothers and children up to and including school age."

This is, indeed, a fearful toll; and when considered in connection with the proven fact that practically all destructive fires are due to ignorance or carelessness or criminal negligence, and are, therefore, preventable, the importance of a properly-directed, intensive movement to curtail the public fire hazard becomes at once apparent.

It is to be hoped that the people of Atlanta will sense the full significance of Fire Prevention Week, appreciate the potential community and individual benefits that may accrue from it; and that every citizen will do his part toward making it a thorough success.

THE VOTE IN MICHIGAN.

The results of the recent primary contests in Michigan have put that state decidedly in the "doubtful column" with regard to the outcome of the congressional elections next November.

Senator Townsend was renominated by the republicans; former Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris was the choice of the democratic party as its nominee for the United States senate.

In the republican scrimmage Newberryism was the paramount issue; and Senator Townsend's supporters interpret his victory as a vindication of his record as one of Newberry's stauncest supporters on the floor of the senate.

Townsend won out over three other contenders for the G. O. P. nomination.

Each of his opponents made Newberryism the issue, and fought him on the strength of his vote in favor of his colleague who stands convicted by a Michigan jury of having bought with cold cash a seat in "the most august deliberative body in the world."

This had the effect, of course, of dividing the anti-Newberry vote between the three anti-Townsend candidates, and Townsend, with the support of the regular republican organization and the few followers of Newberry, carried off the prize, though he fell far short of receiving a majority of the votes cast.

Former Governor Ferris, the democratic nominee opposing Townsend, is a man who has never been defeated in a political contest in Michigan.

He has been long in public life in that state and has frequently held elective office.

Although Michigan is a rock-ribbed republican state and Ferris is a life-long democrat, he has always won by the sheer strength of his personality and public confidence in his honor and integrity as a man.

Undoubtedly Ferris will receive the support of many thousands of independent voters and of republicans who gag at Newberry and Newberryism.

Even the republican leaders in Michigan, who are regular supporters of Townsend, admit this to be true and concede that in the final election next November Ferris has better than a "fighting chance" to become the next senator from the Wolverine state.

At any rate, the contest between the two men will be watched with more than passing interest by political observers in all parts of the country.

The former kaiser's new wife will at least have an advantage over some wives in not having to worry about how to keep her husband at home.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

UNFOLDING THE MYSTERIES.

I shall never cease to wonder at the marvelousness of the telephone. And the thing that mystifies me most is not that a voice can be sent across a wire, but that my friend's voice may be sent, exactly as it is.

Tonight I "listened in" to a beautiful concert. I merely touched the buttons of a simple machine in my library and heard music that was as sweet and clear as though sung within the room itself—though it was actually almost fifty miles away. And I got it through that little instrument attached by a wire from my window to a tall tree in my yard.

A friend handed me a magazine in which I have read a most interesting article headed "The Heart-Beat of a Plant." Sir J. C. Bose, the noted Hindu plant biologist, says that plants and trees have a heart beat similar to that of animals and human beings, with this exception, that the beat in the plant or tree is accomplished by minute cells "each of which expands and contracts with a throbbing action, continually drawing up water from below and expelling it upward to the next cell."

No matter where we go, whether to the rocks which have implanted within themselves the history of millions of years and the unwritten stories of countless events of living beings, or whether we seek the color in the flower or the silent story within the clouds, behind the stars, or about the daily life of the tiniest insects, still may we find that which speaks to the soul of mysteries yet to be unfolded.

Volumes have been written on the life of the bee, and yet a new thing has been recently observed—that the bees have a language! Experiments by Professor Karl von Frisch, explained in a review in The Scientific American, tells about it. And this language is the language of touch.

Each year finds us richer in knowledge of the unfolding mysteries of life.

Our fathers would "blink" a thousand times over at the great discoveries and inventions of this day could they be permitted but an hour of what we have constantly before our very eyes.

All life is an unfolding. As age creeps upon us we see in clearer ways. Our attitude is not so confusing to those about us. We are sounder in opinion and gentler in action. Our natures are softened—because we have grown bigger, and understand through knowledge and experience.

Hollomon Writes From French Lick Springs Of Radio, "The Dome" and the Mystic Valley

Editor's Note—James A. Hollomon, Washington staff correspondent, has been at French Lick Springs, Ind., for ten days. Thousands of his readers had been wondering where Mr. Hollomon had been in hiding since the recent state primary. The following letter, written by him to Frank L. Stanton, will shed some light upon the recent activities, or inactivities, of these Constitution men, and incidentally will interest radio fans as to the great and growing possibilities of entertainment from the air.

Mr. Hollomon's letter, written in a vein of privacy, but in his usual graphic style, follows in full, and by consent of Mr. Stanton.

French Lick Springs Hotel,
French Lick Springs, Ind.,
September 24, 1922.

My Dear Stanton:

I wish you were here, out here in these Hoosier hills, the chief excitement is watching the flying squirrels jump from the elms to the maples, and back to ground, and then run for dear life to hide themselves in some of the many little receptacles built for them, we are all of a common mind, and exist with a single objective.

* * * *

The first thing in the morning is to get out of bed, as we have been told to do, and then drink three glasses of hot pluto, take lots of time about dressing and shaving and the like, walk briskly around the commons, or the hotel links, and—eat.

That is a very important detail.

Then comes the very delightful and interesting wait for luncheon; and the afternoon is passed most entertainingly waiting for dinner; and then another brisk walk around the wooded hotel green, and—well, usually to bed.

Except, however, when I play "setback."

We generally make it two bits a ring and I am paying my share of the "tips" to the little black-faced, red-frocked devils, who bring us the hot water.

There are so many thrills associated with this internal and eternal "waiting"—waiting for the dining room to open—that all thoughts of the recent campaign in Georgia; and of the approaching state democratic convention; and of "who struck Billy Patterson," meaning, of course, Jim Woodward, and Jim Key, and Billy Hardwick and Bud Blalock, et al., have so completely been lost in the maze of French literature that decorates the menu card, that we have forgotten there is such a thing as politics left in the world—

Albeit, we must not forget that we are in the very Mecca of national democracy, for what ex-Senator Tom Taggart, who owns this spa and hotel, doesn't know about the democratic party in this country Charlie Murphy of New York does—

I'd say that Tom is the ace of clubs, and Charlie the ace of diamonds.

* * * *

But getting back to this dining room business, which is always nearest my heart—

You can score another beat for us!

Who do you suppose the head waiter is?

William H. Hall, who used to be head waiter at the Georgian Terrace in Atlanta!

The acquaintanceship was very beneficial to us, for with something like 500 guests daily, most of whom are immensely wealthy, or out or in famous, or both, it is not to be escaped that this erect, stalwart-looking son of the south—as black as the ace of spades but as polite as a dancing master—ushers us the full length, through 300 lineal feet of Paris gowns and conventional dinner suits, with all heads turned in a conscious inquiry as to "who in the h—— those two guys are."

Believe me, it pays to know celebrities like Billy Hall. And he is a celebrity!

Billy is today the most famous head waiter in America, in absolute executive charge of the dining room personnel in the premier resort hotel of this country.

He has around 200 table waiters and a dozen assistants, under his control, and he knows perhaps more men and women of distinction, in all branches of political, professional, business and social life, than any other man of his profession, of any race on the western continent.

That's going some!

Hall's home is in Chicago. He has acquired a large fortune. He is a typical southern darky—proud of his section, and an inspiration to his race.

* * * *

One of the pleasant pastimes here is an evening walk to West Baden Springs and hotel—one mile across the valley.

This is the Lost River valley—amid the storied Indiana hills, in the southern part of the state—and named because of the eccentric habit of the river in disappearing completely from the surface, at a point up the valley about twenty-five miles from here, and then reappearing again a few miles below here, and thence making its way on to the sea as good rivers always do.

Of coruse the stream simply comes to a rift in the valley, caused by some prehistoric disturbance, drops into a subterranean passage, and finds its way back to the surface when the surface altitude drops to or below its underground channel.

But it is a queer, shaky-looking situation, at that.

It is a valley of many mysteries—not counting the Lost River—and of many romances and traditions.

Mostly romances, I judge, from appearances!

Cool, green grottoes and echoing caves call the adventurous; broad plateaus sweep to every angle; winding trails through great dark forests beset the rolling hills—and the nucleus of all in the span of great health springs that have long made of the section the unchallenged Carlsbad of America.

* * * *

The other night we walked across this valley to West Baden to see the great dam—one of the engineering wonders of the world—enveloped in its myriad of shaded lights; and as we entered the vast atrium, we heard a sweet, full soprano voice singing that beautiful concert number "Mighty Lonesome for Somebody."

We stopped suddenly. We felt the human presence; the touch. There was a thrill, and then a chill when some one said "that is Charlotte Crumbley singing, and she is in Atlanta."

"What the—" but I didn't finish the exclamation; for just then we heard the familiar voice of George Congdon ring out the announcement "this is station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Georgia."

The words pounded from one side of that great rotunda to the other as if they had been shot out of a cannon.

Can you beat it?

I don't know much about radio but I must confess an uncanny rigor trickled up my spinal column that I never felt before.

It thrilled me all right; but it also awed me.

We rushed through the rotunda that is as large as a city square like a grey fox after a woods rat; and I tried to follow.

He had already spied a protruding magnavox from a room behind a sixth story balcony, overlooking the rotunda, and he made a leap for this radio room.

I could appreciate the effect of six days at the French Lick Springs.

In this studio we found J. L. Blocker and his son, John, in charge of the West Baden hotel radio service, receiving at the moment an Atlanta Constitution concert for a party of assembled guests in the rotunda below; and the enthusiasm as number after number, with Signor Volpi's accompaniment, was sung, was as intense and unrestrained as I have ever seen in a close-up concert audience under the most favorable circumstances. The touch was so close and human that some of the auditors encored for a repeat.

* * * *

Here I was—a member of The Atlanta Constitution staff—temporarily in the middle west, hundreds of miles distant from Atlanta, finding myself by accident, member of a radio concert party listening in to a concert from the studio in my own home offices—and with as much satisfaction and enjoyment as to the tone and rhythm and modluation of the music, exceptional in its quality and rendition as if I was standing within a dozen feet of the artists.

Such is radio from station WGM!

It beats me!

I left West Baden that night with a new regard and a keener respect for this master of modern science—the future of which, in the scope and merit of entertainment, will within the next ten years perhaps rival in popularity the great silent drama which has become one of the world's most potential industries.

And in addition to entertainment, its field is broad and powerful. We heard of the Whitehall street fire in Atlanta first through this same radio station, long before the news could have reached us by wire.

Saturday night I, through the courtesy of Mr. Blocker, tuned in to different concert numbers throughout the United States, Detroit, Pittsburg, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Indianapolis, and our own WGM among them. They came in as clear as evening bells; and the ether was literally charged with music from the four cardinal points of the continent.

WGM was as strong and as well modulated, and apparently as near, as the closer stations—and the way George pronounced the "Atlanta, Georgia," carried us back across the Cumberlands; and we were almost homesick.

Wonderful is radio!

* * * *

Sunday evening I journeyed over the valley again and tuned in on The Constitution's 8 to 9 o'clock program.

It was even more wonderful than on the former occasions.

Static and station interferences were apparently shut out by the supreme force of WGM in carrying out the waves; and the sermon of Congressman Upshaw, and the musical numbers came through with as perfect volume and as clear and distinct and rich in tone and enunciation as if the characters had been standing upon a stage before us.

Particularly rich and gripping was the rendition of "Old Pal of Mine"—so beautiful that Blocker wheeled the magnavox to the hotel rotunda, and it sounded and echoed through the great court with a volume that caught every ear, and held the hundreds of guests as if they had been glued to the tile floors.

I stood at the window and watched them below.

The beautiful, soft, well rounded and yet ringing words swept across and around and then penetrated to the very heights of the dome, 130 feet in the air; and then spread out slowly and softly like an opening parachute, and descended upon the auditors with an echoing force of musical rhythm that was as symmetrical as the details of line and decoration that had crept into the vision.

It was more than wonderful. It was indeed, marvelous—and I wish you could have heard it as I did, and as hundreds of guests heard it.

* * * *

First, you must appreciate this colossal atrium—a majestic circular court more than 200 feet in diameter, canopied by a skylighted dome 130 feet above, the vast expanse, large enough to maneuver a regiment of soldiers, being without columns or an upright obstruction of any kind.

Can you imagine it?

As one enters, the floor stretches away into the far distance.

Hundreds of windows rise story above story high into the air, blending on either side into the curve of a huge circle.

And far above all is the mighty dome—the story of whose fame has long ago encircled the globe.

The harmony of blended shades in mosaics, statuary, furniture and hangings steals upon the senses.

The world of care and struggle is shut out.

Here is a world of its own—a world of shadowy mysteries; a world of enchantment and of rest.

It is most glorious at night.

Table lamps gleam out into the semidarkness.

Statuary is faintly outlined against the background of palms—and above all is the rare deep blue of the evening skies.

It is one of the most picturesque settings in America; and it is here that we heard The Constitution's musical program by wireless—heard it with all of its richness of quality and tone.

Too much praise cannot be spoken for WGM and the coterie of artists, including the incomparable "Aces," whose orchestral numbers came through with every degree of merit, for the service it is rendering to countless thousands throughout the United States—and for the high-class entertainment it is furnishing its invisible audiences every night.

I recall that I had something to do with the inception of The Constitution's radio department, and today I am proud that it was my privilege.

* * * *

It is about the dinner hour.

A friend has been playing golf with Fred Paxon and Mrs. Paxon, of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob T. Patterson, of Atlanta, have been looking on—and I have spent the better part of the "wait" between luncheon and dinner writing to you.

Otherwise I would have been again and further engaged in the usual excitement of watching the squirrels.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

THE PROHIBITION SOUSE.

Almost anywhere any day, if you will look about you will see boys ranging in age from twelve to eighteen years, according to the general moral depravity of the community, smoking cigarettes and doing it in a manner that plainly spells "showing off." You and I, whether we smoke or drink or not, remember such boys in our day. If we trace them we find that many of them turned out bad eggs and are now dead, in prison or human derelicts of one type or another. The trouble with such boys isn't just devilishness or rowdyism; the trouble is inherent and mental defect; they are morons, mental weaklings and to make anything of them requires a great deal more care and watchfulness on the part of parents than it does to train boys of average or normal mentality. You will recollect how such boys were invariably slow and backward in school, worldly wise, to be sure, and dangerously so in view of their close association in school with normal youngsters, but high-grade imbeciles nevertheless.

As late as twenty years ago drinking was still, well, connived at by the business and professional world and the public at large. A doctor, lawyer, merchant or thief might make a beast of himself at more or less frequent intervals and still keep his place in popular esteem. There were still a few very old-fashioned folk who actually argued that a carousal made the doctor, the lawyer, merchant or thief all the better when he sobered up! But for several years before prohibition settled over the country drinking had come to be a mark of the incompetent, and public opinion had veered around to a point which encouraged a man to say on any occasion and without any apology that he was on the water wagon.

I have received numerous letters from readers, chiefly women, who tell how a brother, a father or a husband has become a "prohibition drunkard." Usually the man has always been a moderate or occasional drinker, but now that even moderate or occasional drinking is discouraged by the government, the man proceeds to "show 'em" by making a bigger fool of himself and incidentally bringing unhappiness and humiliation upon those who by rights are entitled to respect from him. Is there any hope for such a specimen? Can he be restored by any form of discipline or treatment?

The ordinary alcoholic may be successfully freed from his craving by a comparatively simple and inexpensive course of medical treatment by any good physician in any hospital or sanitarium or at home if the services of a well-trained nurse or attendant can be had. There are various methods of treatment successfully administered, such as the method given to the medical profession several years ago by Dr. Alexander Lambert, and which has restored some awful bums to sobriety and industry. Don't write to me about this method. It is familiar to, or at least readily available to every physician.

The "prohibition souse" is a very low order. Only a thoroughgoing fool will swallow the stuff that the bootleggers supply. Yet even such a defective may be saved.

STRIKE TO BLAME FOR SCHOOL BOOK DEARTH, SUTTON

Superintendent of Schools W. A. Sutton said Tuesday that on account of delay of shipments occasioned by the railroad strike, the board of education has been unable to furnish the pupils of the first and second grades in all the schools with free textbooks.

The delay, he stated, is unavoidable, and as fast as shipments arrive they will be distributed to the children until every child in the two grades is supplied.

ON THE ATLANTIC

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

On the Atlantic, September 26.—Today I experienced my first storm at sea. "A bit of a wind," the purser called it, holding tightly to his desk to keep his feet. It was about 9 o'clock that my optimistic friend who has crossed 58 times called attention to a tiny black cloud in the southwest. I suddenly remembered important things to do in my stateroom.

After a half hour there was a lively scurry in the hallways and the closing of portholes. My wife suggested we go on deck and gaze at the "mountainous waves." The look I gave her is nobody's business.

"We'll stay right here!" I said—but we didn't, for the ship decided to sit down or something and I went under the wash basin and she against a trunk. "Set 'em up in the other alley!" I cried, determined to be always merry and bright in the very teeth of the gale.

Then the ship began to shiver and plunge and roll over on one side. The steward came with his infernal "rat-de-tat-tat, (pause) tat-tat." He wanted to know if there was anything he could do. I told him he might go up in the library and bring me a prayer book.

And as he went away I called: "If you can't get that bring us another set of life preservers." Down below I could hear the jangle of many bells. And would you believe it, across the hall a group of young athletes on a world tour began to sing: "Many Brave Hearts Are Asleep in the Deep!"

At one of the gigantic dips my one-lunged typewriter scooted off the dressing table and struck me in the back of the neck. It fell to the floor with a whirr and snapping of springs. But somehow I didn't care. I figured my writing days were ended anyhow.

It was all over as quickly as it began. The ship began to steady. Sun streamed through the portholes and when I reached the promenade people were doing their turns as if nothing had happened. The orchestra was playing for lunch but I noticed a decided paleness. And most of the male passengers were headed for the bar.

All the ladies are wearing their new Parisian gowns. There is a reason. When the gowns are worn it lessens the custom duty in New York. The short skirt is passe. Nearly all skirts now barely miss trailing the ground. The shoes are low-heeled.

In a deck chair on the port side is a red-headed Apollo. He is big and upstanding with a Grecian profile the ladies adore. He wears white flannels and a rakish soft hat. Several young flappers are unable to keep away from his side of the ship. This afternoon he was down in the hold. He has a group of trained monkeys that he is going to present in vaudeville. And all the girls think he is a duke of some sort.

Each day the clock jumps back 40 minutes. At 12 o'clock there is a short blast of a siren and this is notice for passengers to turn back their watches. There is a young lady on board with an anklet watch and if she is on deck when the siren toots she discreetly retires to the inner recesses.

The florist who coined the phrase "Say It With Flowers!" is a passenger. He has been over in Europe on a wild orchid hunt. If you'd ask the ordinary man to go on an orchid hunt he'd probably feel like slapping you in the face with a perfumed puff ball. As a matter of fact, he tells me that collectors have been lured into strange unknown regions and faced death at the hands of savages and wild men in New Guinea and Madagascar. Trailing the orchid offers almost as many thrills as tracking the tiger. There are scores of martyrs to this botanical science. Bones of orchid hunters are bleached on many sunscorched sands.

PITHY PARAGRAPHS

Only the back numbers haven't heard about the Pithy Paragraph film at the Howard theater. The live ones have found how easy the $5 checks come and everybody's trying for 'em.

One man said there must be a hitch somewhere—it looked too easy. Five dollars in these tight days for a screen joke of a dozen words? That's just it.

There is no dearth of jokes. The press of the world is at our disposal; the journals of the great library of congress are combed every day for topics of humor. But Pithy Paragraphs are for the readers of The Constitution and the patrons of the Howard. The editor believes in giving local humor a chance. Are you taking advantage of the chance given you?

See below how easy it is. The two best ones, contributed by Julia F. Patton and Mary Mar, are awarded two tickets to the Howard theater.

"KIN THEY?"

She asked the fruit man, thin.
"No," he replied, "I can't decide,
"But I know bananas kin."

M'KENZIE WHISKY CASE BEFORE JURY

A probe of evidence into the case of Marshall McKenzie, well known local insurance man, accused of violating the prohibition law, was in process Tuesday before the federal grand jury, it was ascertained from an authoritative source. No developments in the case were reported late in the afternoon.

More than a dozen witnesses appeared before the grand jury Monday and Tuesday to testify regarding the alleged liquor dealings with McKenzie, and a number of other witnesses who had been subpoenaed previous to the ruling of Judge Sibley last Friday who held that the government could not use testimony from witnesses whose names had been obtained from papers illegally seized by officers in a search of the McKenzie home.

In handing down his decision Judge Sibley ruled that evidence obtained by the government in an illegal way could not be used before the grand jury in an effort to convict a person. It was pointed out by counsel for McKenzie that prohibition enforcement officers accompanied by George E. Golding, special investigator for the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department, had obtained private papers from McKenzie's home after they had obtained a search warrant to seek illicit whisky in the place.

Chapman Claims Taxes Were Paid Before Primary

H. K. Chapman, whom City Registrar W. S. Richardson charged Monday was disqualified from voting in the recent primary because he had failed to pay his taxes, replied to this statement Tuesday. Chapman had previously made wholesale charges of fraud in connection with the registration list.

Mr. Chapman claims his 1921 taxes were paid for him and that Richardson failed to credit the amount.

"As a matter of record and of fact," said Mr. Chapman, "I have employed a well known firm of honorable gentlemen, paying them for their services they render, in order that my taxes are always paid at the proper time to have me kept on the permanent list required by the state law to be kept by Richardson, and which he told me was not given to him by his predecessor.

"If anyone in Mr. Richardson's office cares to credit the wrong persons in any batch of taxes covered by one big check he could do so and the name that they wish not to be registered is slipped out and another substituted, then the name which is so removed can be held out until too late to be registered, and added into same batch of voters who care nothing for their voting rights.

"I do not say this was done in my case but I do say on Mr. Richardson's books my taxes were not credited in time for me to be registered in state and county."

Doctor Extracts Open Safety Pin Child Swallowed

An open safety pin was extracted from the stomach of Mac Asbill, the 6-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Asbill, 33 E. Sixth street, at the Davis-Fischer sanitarium, by Dr. J. H. Buff last Wednesday, it was learned Tuesday.

X-rays showed that the pin had lodged at the entrance to the stomach in such a manner that it could not be withdrawn. To push it down into the stomach would have necessitated a dangerous operation. Dr. Buff improvised a pair of pliers by means of some wire and a rubber tube and made a loop in the end of a wire. With the aid of an electric light lowered to the entrance of the stomach, one end of the pin was seized with the pliers, the loop in the wire was passed over the other end of the pin and drawn up. In this manner the safety pin was closed and withdrawn without the use of a knife.

Surgeons who witnessed the operation are quoted as saying that it was one of the most ingenious operations ever performed. Young "Mac" is now none the worse for his adventure.

John C. Hallman Celebrates His 79th Birth Anniversary

John C. Hallman celebrated his 79th birthday Tuesday amid the congratulations of his hundreds of friends. Mr. Hallman came to Atlanta immediately following the war between the states, setting up in the wholesale grocery business. He is now retired from active business and lives at 163 West Peachtree street.

During his half-century residence in Atlanta, in which time he has been very active in the building up of the city, Mr. Hallman has won the respect and love of all with whom he came in contact, and thousands in the city are wishing him the pleasure of many other happy birthdays.

"Among Atlanta's pioneer citizens it is doubtful if any have merited or received the love and appreciation which has been the lot of Mr. Hallman," declared one of his friends. "He has seen the city of Atlanta grow from a ruined city of war days into the thriving metropolis which now bears the name of the "New York of the South," and he enjoys the satisfaction of knowing that he has helped in great measure to build the community which is his home."

Gillett Funeral.

Funeral services for A. A. Gillett, well-known Atlantan who died Monday noon at the home of his son, C. C. Gillett, 205 Lucile avenue, will be held this morning from the chapel of Harry G. Poole. Pallbearers will be selected from Fulton Lodge No. 32, I. O. O. F., of which he was a member, and interment will be in the mausoleum at North View cemetery.

Parlor Rifle Victim Is Buried Tuesday; Playmates Bear Pall

The funeral of Herbert Strickland, 11, of 332 Peeples street, who was accidentally shot Saturday morning while attempting to unload a .22 calibre rifle, was held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Park Street Methodist church.

Pallbearers were members of his class at the Peeples Street school and of his Sunday school class at the Park Methodist church.

Leathers' Shortage Under Investigation By Postal Sleuths

An investigation by officials of the postoffice inspector's department into the records kept by Charles R. Leathers, veteran clerk in the Nixie railway mail department, who was arrested Monday on charges of embezzlement of postage stamps valued at several hundred dollars, was under way Tuesday, according to inspectors.

Leathers was arraigned before United States Commissioner W. Colquitt Carter Tuesday morning. He waived preliminary hearing and was bound over to the federal district court in bond of $500. He was released upon furnishing bail.

Following his arrest, Leathers is said to have made a full confession to Inspectors Reese and Tomlinson, in which he admitted the larceny of stamps valued at several hundred dollars since last April, they claim. At the time he was taken into custody Leathers is said to have concealed in his pockets $15 worth of stamps.

J. P. Johnston, inspector in charge, stated Tuesday that a complete investigation of the records kept by Leathers would be made to ascertain if possible, the actual amount of alleged thefts attributed to Leathers.

Woodward's Face No Longer Hangs In Honor Place

Walter Taylor Consigns Oil Portrait of Former Mayor to Basement.

James G. Woodward declared that if he was elected mayor "City Clerk Walter Taylor would have to go to work." Mr. Woodward wasn't elected, however.

Mr. Taylor said the former mayor was trying to "insult" him. He figured on challenging the ex-mayor to a duel or something.

He sat in his office and pondered Woodward's threats and charges. Suddenly his gaze rested on a resplendent oil painting of the former mayor which has adorned the walls of the city clerk's office several years.

"Woodward must come down," said the city clerk, and called the janitor. When the janitor had finished his work the painting reposed securely in the city hall basement vault.

The city clerk said Tuesday he felt somewhat appeased.

Stevens May Run For the Speakership Of Georgia House

Representative-elect C. O. Stevens, of Oglethorpe county, may be a candidate for the speakership of the house of representatives when it convenes next summer, he announced in a message sent to Atlanta Monday. Mr. Stevens has served several times in the house and two terms as state senator from his district. Mr. Stevens said he can muster the support of quite a number of leading members of the house and also of prominent officials of the state in his race.

"I have always been a conservative in my views and acts, never radical or extreme. I belong to no political faction or clique. I have always been a clean, straight democrat," he said.

Speaker Cecil Neill, of Muscogee county, is a candidate for re-election as speaker while other candidates are Charles Stewart, of Atkinson county, and J. H. Ennis, of Baldwin county.

FUNERAL SERVICE AT SACRED HEART FOR MRS. FALVEY

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary E. Falvey, beloved Atlanta woman, who died early Tuesday morning at her residence, 26 Peachtree place, will be held this morning at 9:30 o'clock at the Sacred Heart church, Rev. Father J. A. Horton officiating. Interment will take place at Oakland cemetery, with Barclay & Brandon in charge.

Mrs. Falvey, who was 63 years of age, was born and reared in Atlanta. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Murphy, pioneer residents of the city, and her husband was the late J. J. Falvey, one of the first produce merchants of Atlanta, whose death occurred 28 years ago.

Mrs. Falvey was one of the most prominent and devout members of the Sacred Heart church, and was connected with every society and branch of work in her church. During the world war she led her chapter in doing active relief work for wounded, and also made garments for French orphans. She responded to every charitable cause which came to her attention.

Mrs. Falvey had been in failing health for the past six months, following a serious operation, and for several weeks she had been very ill. Several days before her death all hope for recovery was abandoned by physicians.

She is survived by a son, T. Esmonde Falvey, well-known Atlanta advertising man, and two sisters, Miss Hannie Murphy and Miss Lizzie Murphy, with whom she made her home. Another son, the late John Falvey, died about twelve years ago.

ANNIE T. JOHNSON BURIED IN THOMSON

The body of Mrs. Annie T. Johnson, 61, wife of R. H. Johnson, well-known McDuffie county merchant, who died Monday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. L. A. Moore, of 114 Cinclair avenue, was taken to Thomson, Ga., Tuesday for burial.

Mrs. Johnson is survived by her husband; six daughters, Mrs. L. A. Moore and Mrs. Arthur Maness, of Atlanta; Mrs. V. C. Hatcher, of Thompson; Mrs. Reginald Maxwell, of Augusta, Ga., Miss Mary Johnson, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Eleanor Johnson, of Thomson; and four sons, Bartow, Lamar and R. H. Johnson, Jr., of Atlanta, and Harry Johnson, of Thomson, Ga.

PROMINENT MASON IS BURIED TUESDAY

David Shepherd, 68, of Lithonia, retired business man and one of the founders of the Stone Mountain lodge of Masons, was buried in West View cemetery Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, with the Masons in charge of the funeral.

Mr. Shepherd was a native of Scotland, and had been in the granite business in the vicinity of Atlanta for 40 years. He is survived by his wife, two sons, David Craig, and James Shepherd, of Atlanta, and a grandson, D. C. Shepherd, Jr.

Awtry & Lowndes had charge of the funeral.

Now Is a Good Time To Buy Diamonds

Wholesale prices by the cutters have already advanced slightly on some grades over last year's figures.

In every new series of "rough" the cutters find that the cost is higher than the last.

These advances have not yet been followed by us nor by the retail trade as a whole, but indications point strongly to steadily advancing prices, and we think this a favorable time to purchase.

The L. & N. Railroad Brings Good Northern Farmers to Better Farm Lands In the South

For many years the Louisville & Nashville Railroad has conducted an educational campaign of solicitation among farmers all over the North, in a systematic effort to induce them to move South. By personal representatives and through the printed word, in such forms as magazines, farm papers, booklets, folders, letters, etc., this railroad has painted the attractions of the South to the farmer who lives in the colder sections of the North and Central West.

Tangible evidence of the success of this work is seen in happy homes and flourishing communities all over the territory served by the L. & N.; this work marking pioneer development in these sections and adding untold millions to the general community wealth.

The Industrial and Immigration Department of the L. & N. Serves Both the Farmer and the Community

This Department renders a distinct service, both to the farmer and to the community in which he locates. Its agents are not satisfied until the farmer has found the exact piece of land he requires and has been scientifically instructed how to make and market a profitable crop.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad has nothing to sell except its services as a common carrier. It does not own land, mines or other things in which the public is invited to invest. Its Industrial and Immigration Department is conducted entirely for the good of the community and the individual.

This Department has issued many helpful booklets, among which as notable examples are "L. & N. Farmer's Hand-book No. 1", which tells how to store and market sweet potatoes; "L.&N. Farmer's Hand-book No. 2", which gives valuable advice on poultry problems; "L. & N. Hand-book No. 3", which has been of particular service to apple growers, throughout the South; and a specially prepared booklet on "The Production and Marketing of Satsuma Oranges."

In addition to these books, the Department has issued valuable bulletins to stock producers and has given wide circulation to tables showing the year around temperatures in many Northern localities, as compared to the delightfully temperate conditions that exist throughout the South. Any of these booklets, or other information will be gladly furnished on request of the Industrial and Immigration Department of the L. & N., at Louisville, Ky.

No Discontinuation of Passenger Service

Notwithstanding the severe conditions under which railroads have been obliged to operate during the past two months, the L. & N., up to the present time, has not found it necessary to discontinue any of its passenger train or sleeping car service.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week

The Great Prince of Shan

BY E. PHILIPS OPPENHEIM

Next Week, "Joan of the Everglades"
By Millard C. Horton

Curzon street was empty when she inserted the little key in the front door. There was not a soul there to see her step in the hall as it swung open. Then softly, noiselessly, but without any conscious effort of her own, the door closed again behind her.

Still, without any lack of courage, but oppressed with that curious sense or unreality, she turned almost automatically towards the door on the left and opened it. She realized that she was in one of the principal reception rooms of the house. Opposite to her was the ebony cabinet of which La Belle Nita had spoken. Lady Maggie moved towards it. Somehow or other, in her hand, stooping down. She found herself with the other key, counted the drawers, one, two three—fitted in the key, turned it, and realized with a little start the presence in the drawer of a roll of parchment tied around with tape and sealed with a black seal.

She laid her hand upon it, but even at that moment she felt a shiver pass through her body.

There had been no sound in the room, which she could have sworn had been empty when she entered it, yet she had a conviction that she was not alone. She turned slowly around, her lips parted, breathing quickly.

Standing in the middle of the room—a grim commanding figure in his flowing green robes, the dim light flashing upon the great diamonds in his belt—stood Prince Shan.

To Maggie at that moment came a great throbbing in her ears, a sense of remoteness from this terrible happening, followed by an intense and vital consciousness of danger. The man who had brought new things into her life, the polished gentleman of the world, with his fascinating brain and gentle courtesy, had gone. It was Prince Shan of China who stood there.

She felt the chill of his contempt and disapproval in her heart. She had forfeited her high estate. She was a convicted thief—an adventuress.

She gripped at the side of the cabinet. Her poise had gone. She had the air of a trapped animal.

"You!" she exclaimed, "How did you get here?"

He answered her without change of expression. A sense of crisis seemed to have made his tone more level, his face stony.

"It is my house," he said. "I do not often leave it. I sat in my sleeping chamber behind"—he pointed to the silken curtains through which he had passed—"I heard your entrance and guessed with pain and regret at your mission."

"But a quarter of an hour ago you were at the ball!"

"You are mistaken," he replied. "The person whom you saw was a gentleman from my suite, who wore the dress of an inferior mandarin. He is sometimes supposed to resemble me."

Her fingers had left the drawer now. She stood upright, pale and desparate.

"I came here as a thief," she confessed. "I am detected. What are your intentions?"

He moved very slowly a little closer to her. Maggie felt her sense of excitement grow.

"You came here as a thief," he repeated, "as a spy. Why did you not ask me for the information you desired?"

"Because you would not have told me," she replied, "at least you would not have told me the truth."

"For a price," he said, "the truth would have been yours for the asking. For a different price it is yours now."

Again, without noticeable movement he seemed to have drawn nearer. The edge of that cool ebony cabinet seemed to be burning her fingers. Try however hard, she could not frame the question which had risen to her lips.

"The price," he continued, "is you—yourself. A few hours ago it was your love I craved for. Now it is yourself."

He was so near to her now that she faced the steady radiance of his wonderful eyes, so near that she could trace the faint lines about his mouth, the strong, stern immobility of his perfectly shaped olive-tinted features.

"You are too wonderful," he went on, "to remain a daughter of the crude west. I want to take you back with me to the land where life still moves to poetry, to the land where one can live in a world unknown by these struggling hordes. You shall live in a palace where the perfume of flowers lingers always, with the sound of running water in your ears, a palace from which all sordid things and all manner of ugliness are banished because we alone have found the key to the garden of happiness."

He raised his hand, and it seemed as though unseen eyes watched them from every quarter. The silken curtains through which he had issued were drawn back by invisible hands, and the inner apartment was disclosed. Its faint illumination was obscured with purple shades. There was a high laquer bedstead with little ivory ladders on either side, a bedstead hung with silks of black and purple and mauve. There was a huge couch, a shrine opposite the bed, in which was a kneeling figure of black marble. A faint odor, as though from thousand-year-old sachets, very faint indeed and yet with its mead of intoxication, seemed to steal out from the room, which had borrowed from its curious hangings, its marvellous adornments, its strangely attuned atmosphere, all the mysticism of a fabled world.

"You have come," said the prince. "Will you stay?"

The inertia seemed suddenly to leave her limbs. She threw up her head as though gasping for air, escaped, somehow or other from the thrall of his eyes, and passed across the smooth floor with flying footsteps.

Her fingers seized the handle of the door and turned it, only to find it held by some invisible fastening. She shook it passionately. There was not even sound. She turned back once more. Prince Shan had only slightly changed his position. He stood upon the threshold of the inner room, and his arms were outstretched in invitation.

"Am I a prisoner?" she sobbed.

"You came of your own free will," he replied. "You will stay for my pleasure and for the joy of my being As for these things," he went on, moving slowly to the cabinet, picking up the pile of papers and throwing them on one side contemptuously, "these are only one's amusements. I pass my lighter hours with them. They interest me in the same manner as a chess problem. We do not care, we in the mighty east, which of you holds your head highest this side of Suez. All you western nations are to us a peck of dust outside our palace gates.

"Listen, dear one. We can leave, if you will, tonight, and top the clouds before sunrise. And I promise you this," he went on, "when you pass from the greyness of these sordid lands into the everlasting sunshine of the east, you will not care any longer about these people who go about the world on all fours. Day by day you will know what life and love mean. You will find the cloying weight of material things pass from your brain and body, and the joy of holy and wonderful living take their place."

Her whole being was in a turmoil. She drew nearer to the papers upon the table. She was now within a yard of Prince Shan himself. He made no effort to intercept her, no movement of any sort to stop her. Only his eyes never left her face, and she felt a madness which seemed to be choking the life out of her, a pounding of her heart against her ribs, a strange and wonderful joy, a joy in which there was no fear, a joy of new things and new hopes.

With the documents for which she had come only a few yards away, she forgot them. She turned her head slowly. His arms seemed to steal out from those long, silken sleeves. She suddenly felt herself held in a wonderful embrace.

"Dear lady of all my desires," he whispered in her ear, "you shall make me happy and find the secret of happiness yourself in giving, in suffering, in love."

For a long and wonderful moment she lay in his arms. She felt the soft burning of his kisses, the call of the room with its intoxicating, yet strangely ascetic perfume, the room to which all the time he seemed to be gently leading her.

And then a flood of strange, alien recollection and realizations seemed to bring her from a better place back to a worse—the sound of a passing taxicab, the distant booming of Big Ben, sounds of the world outside, the actual day-by-day world, with its day-by-day code of morals, the world in which she lived, and her friends, and all that had made life for her. She drew away, and he watched the change in her.

"I want to go!" she cried. "Let me go!"

"You are no prisoner," he assured her sadly.

He clapped his hands. She had reached the door by now and found the handle yield to her fingers. Their eyes met, and his were very sorrowful.

"My servants are assembling," he said. "You will find a car at your service."

Even then she hesitated. There was a strange return of the wonderful emotion of a few minutes ago. She hoped almost painfully that he would call. Instead, he lifted the silk hangings and passed out of sight.

It was not until they were in Piccadilly that she suddenly remembered that she had left upon the table the papers he had scornfully offered her. Then she began to laugh.

It chanced that her box was empty when Maggie, returning with flying footsteps, hastened down the corridor and pushed open the door. She sank into a chair, her knees trembling, her senses still dazed.

And opposite, in the shadows of the distant box, the mock Prince Shan seemed always to be gazing at her with a cryptic smile upon his lips.

Presently the door was stealthily opened. La Belle Nita, her flaming lips widely parted, as soon as she recognized the sole occupant of the box, crept through the opening and closed the door again.

"You are here?" she exclaimed incredulously. "Your courage failed you? You did not go?"

"I have been and returned," Maggie answered. "Now tell me why you lied to me, why you sent me to that house to meet Prince Shan?"

"How did I lie to you?" Nita demanded. "The papers you sought were there. Were they not yours for the asking, or was the price too great?"

"The papers were there, certainly," Maggie acquiesced, "but you knew very well—"

She stopped short. Slowly the Oriental idea of it all was beginning to frame itself in her mind.

"The papers were there, and he, the most wonderful of all men, was there," Nita murmured, "yet you leave him while the night is yet young, you declared, "because you would not understand. If you love him so much, why not go back to him? You will find him quite alone. I dare say you know the secrets of his lockless doors."

La Belle Nita rose to her feet. About her lips there flickered the faintest smile.

"Young English lady," she said, "I shall not go, because I am shut for ever out of his heart. But listen; would you have me go?"

For a moment Maggie's poise was gone again. A strange uncertainty was once more upon her. She was terrified at her own feelings. The smile on the other's lips deepened and then passed away.

"Ah," she murmured, as she departed, "you are not all snow and ice then! There is something of the woman in you. He must have known that. I am better content."

The Fine Art of Booth Tarkington

(Edith Franklin Wyatt, in The North American Review.)

In the marionette shows of Italy whole populaces become interested in the fates of certain puppets whose fortunes they follow through many years. The interest Booth Tarkington's people arouse is akin to this. One of the most pleasing concomitants of his great gift is that, as with the reactive influence of Falstaff's humor, it is a cause of a more actute sense of the art of entertainment in others.

Mr. Tarkington's fiction has the interest of the work of one who seems to have kept an artist's notebook. Street scenes, pictures of dogs, etc., washerwomen, cooks, back yards, picnics and a great quantity of admirable still-lifes—the serial story of the automobile-equine survival—are rendered with the vivacity of a quick sense of picturesque aspects of existence which are not conventionally picturesque.

"As I would not be a slave, so I would not be a master. This expresses my idea of democracy. Whatever differs from this, to the extent of the difference is no democracy." So Abraham Lincoln wrote for an autograph many years ago; and the words may serve as a memento and autograph of a certain national philosophy. I think we are much to be congratulated in the possession of a master of fiction whose work is conceived in the wisdom of that gentleness which sometimes appears the most valuable wisdom known to our nation.

Suppressing Child Labor.

(Herbert Francis Sherwood, in The North American Review.)

The survivors of the children who toiled in the mills, in the earlier days now have children of their own, either in the mills or approaching the working age. The latter is not the early age it was when the southern textile industry was started. The states in which child labor was prevalent, and the mill operators, have inquired into the matter and taken action. In South Carolina, for instance, education is compulsory. No child may work in a mill under 14 years of age. Between the ages of 14 and 16 only those who measure up to certain educational and physical standards may work. Their work day is limited to eight hours. For those over 16, the legal limit is ten hours. Child labor is disappearing.

Clubs of Fifth District Entertained in Conyers

BY LOUISE DOOLY.

Making a sort of game of giving money, this game having the inimitable leadership of Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, of Atlanta, the Fifth District Federation of Women's Clubs, holding its fall meeting in all-day session Tuesday in Conyers, raised $250—$50 of the $500 deficit in the district maintenance fund for Tallulah Falls school. This was done through individual and club subscriptions of from $1 to $25 and the payment of regular pledges which are assured but have been delayed will clear the deck for action in the fifth district on the greater Tallulah project.

The extra subscription was proposed by Mrs. H. H. McCall, of Atlanta, and followed upon a forceful talk by Mrs. John K. Ottley, trustee and acting director for Tallulah school, on the Greater Tallulah project, by which the school trustees, backed by the state executive board and every district president, plan the raising of $50,000 for the extension of Tallulah's plant, equipment and service.

"Use your brains, your interest, your sweetness to raise the fund," said Mrs. Ottley to the clubwomen, "and your work will be easy. A school for mountain children is a thing that appeals to everybody. You will find that people are just waiting for the opportunity to give. Keep in your own mind our slogan, 'Give or get for a Greater Tallulah,' and study everybody you come in contact with as to what would be their attitude if you explained to them Tallulah, its purpose and our campaign."

Building Plan.

The plan of new buildings at Tallulah, said Mrs. Ottley, would include erection of a new school building, conversion of the present school building into a community center and a dormitory or "bachelor hall" for boys, thus releasing the present dormitory cottage for the use of girls exclusively, and other necessary improvements and additions.

Two memorials have already been subscribed, stated Mrs. Ottley, these providing for the auditorium and the library within the school building. A gymnasium, swimming pool, etc., may be provided, also, as memorials, or individual rooms. A life scholarship can be contributed for $2,000.

The need for enlargement of the school, Mrs. Ottley emphasized, is the greatest proof of its success. The children themselves have so learned the value of the school that they do not wait as city children do to be put into the school, but themselves apply for admission in order that they "may have a chance."

Widespread Publicity.

One hundred Georgia newspapers, said Mrs. Ottley, are carrying Tallulah school publicity. "The people of the state know Tallulah's needs," she declared, "and if the clubwomen then get down to personal work it's done." She called attention to the Tallulah Falls human interest program which is to be a feature of the first afternoon session at the state convention in Athens in October, when the $50,000 fund is expected to be well on the way to completion.

Mrs. R. B. Vaughn, of Conyers, president of the hostess club, opened the meeting and Mrs. R. M. Jones, of College Park, responded to her brief address of welcome. The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Albert T. Akers, of Atlanta, and reports were made by Mrs. R. M. Striplin, of Atlanta, recording secretary, Mrs. A. I. Branham, of Kirkwood, corresponding secretary; Mrs. McNeely, treasurer.

Mrs. Joseph Morgan, president of the Pioneer Women's society and a pioneer clubwoman, was invited on the platform, and gave a word of greeting. Miss Jeanie Blackburn, of Bowling Green, Ky., prominent in club work and the patriotic organizations, was a guest of honor.

More than 200 women were in attendance.

Conyers Club Work.

Ten minutes after the federated clubwomen of the fifth district arrived in Conyers for their meeting they were brought up with a start over the outstanding and original character of the women of Conyers and their work.

First, it became known that the Civic Improvement league (the woman's club of Conyers) expects to put on a one-day pig fair this fall, which will promote the work of the boys' pig clubs in conjunction with the county demonstration agents. The Civic Improvement league originated the plan carried out in Rockdale county by which the boys of the pig clubs who make the best records are given registered pigs as prizes on condition that they give back to the league one pig from each of the first two litters. These in turn are given out to the next boys who make the best records.

Already the county is getting rich in registered stock, and the Civic league, which had committed itself to pay the registration costs for the pigs, is being put to it to finance the promise. But the league is very proud of the results.

Right on top of this modern record of community service, the Conyers league presented as an opening feature of the district meeting the singing of "Dear Old Georgia" to the accompaniment of the old-fashioned harp and triangle, two of the three singers playing the quaint instruments.

The gray-haired women of whom so much comment was made at the recent General Federation of Women's Clubs, as the leaders in club work, proved to be the livest wires among Conyers' clubwomen.

Mrs. R. B. Vaughn, president of the Civic league, and Mrs. Elliott, vice-president, were put forward by the league, of which a large proportion of the membership is made up of young women, as their active leaders in all league work.

Work of Club.

The Conyers club during the present year has also established a county serving library, named for its president, Mrs. J. A. Guinn, who had inspired and directed the Rockdale County fair which, in four years, raised the funds that built the library and supplied needed equipment for the Conyers High school to place it among the accredited high schools of the state.

Mrs. Joseph Myers, of Albany, state chairman of home economics, a guest of the district, explained the plan of her department for scholarships in home economics at the State College of Agriculture, these scholarships to be given by districts and to be applied through the student aid foundation. The meeting voted that the district approve the plan, and refer it to the district chairman of home economics to arrange the details of financing the work.

Talk on Federation.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith gave an inspirational talk on federation and the value of the national body to the state bodies and the local clubs.

A motion founded on a message from Mrs. Albert E. Thornton gave the indorsement of the district clubs to the Southeastern fair.

Brief reports were made by representatives of the clubs of the district and chairmen of departments.

An invitation was extended by Mrs. Marvin Underwood, district chairman of fine arts, to the meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club October 9, when the fine arts department will present as the speaker of the day Mrs. Rose V. S. Berry, of Berkeley, Cal., chairman of fine arts for the General Federation.

It was voted that the spring meeting of the fifth district shall always be at Tallulah, the members taking picnic lunches, and the invitation of Lithonia was accepted for the fall meeting next year.

Mrs. Howard H. McCall was chairman of a committee on resolutions, which included Mrs. H. Clay Moore, of East Lake; Mrs. A. I. Branham, of Kirkwood; Mrs. Holt, of College Park; Mrs. Johnson, of Lithonia, and Mrs. R. F. Sams, of Clarkston.

Memorial Service.

A beautiful memorial service was part of the afternoon session. Mrs. T. T. Stevens, of Atlanta, paid tribute to the late Mrs. J. A. Guinn, of Conyers, and to Mrs. L. C. Mathews, of Atlanta, vice president and treasurer of the fifth district.

Mrs. W. F. Melton, acting for the district, paid appropriate tribute to the late Mrs. T. O. Headon and Mrs. D. D. Fuller, of East Point; Mrs. P. F. Heifner, Mrs. Hettie Gay and Mrs. Fred Uzell, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Charles Dowman, of Emory university.

Mrs. Frank McCormack, of Atlanta, read resolutions of thanks to the Civic Improvement league of Conyers for their delightful hospitality.

On motion of Mrs. H. G. Hastings, it was directed that messages of sympathy be sent to Mrs. Albert Thornton on the death of her brother, Alfred Austell; to Mrs. Thomas E. Watson, on the death of Senator Watson; to Mrs. Hugh Willet and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson on their illness which prevented their attendance at the meeting, and to Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, on the death of her sister-in-law, Miss Jennie Inman, philanthropist and friend of Georgia girls.

The 200 clubwomen at the meeting, most of those from out of town motoring to Conyers, were entertained by the Conyers Civic Improvement league at a beautiful luncheon at 2 o'clock, which was served in the high school building, which the league has helped so materially to equip.

TOO SERIOUS MINDED.

"To withstand steadfastly the allurements of life, yet pass no censure on those who yield to them, denotes a gentle breadth of character far removed from the complacent self esteem of the unco guid."—Agnes Repplier.

What a strain it is to see a great deal of a person who is too serious minded!

It is a fine thing to be responsible, to be a good citizen, to have strong principles and a high sense of honor.

Life is Earnest But—

It is a misfortune to let one's sense of the serious side of life so dominate one that one is always in deadly earnest, always talking about serious things, never able to relax and forget for a short while that life is real, life is earnest and the grave is merely a gateway into a life which is still more real and earnest—and uninteresting.

People who take themselves and their principles too seriously are always in danger of bringing the principles they care so much about into disrepute through the antagonism their over-seriousness sets in action. Nothing does more harm to Christainity than does a sour pious Christian. It is human nature to react from any excess to the other extreme.

Like the Pharisee.

And then, too, the serious minded person is always in deadly danger of the besetting sin of the serious minded—self righteousness. He sees a world of frivolous people about him who don't seem to have any sense of the deeper things of life (though often they have far more than he suspects) and he sees himself a self-anointed custodian of the things that count, and how can he help feeling that he is not as other men? Perhaps he is sufficiently advanced to recognize that other men are not wholly to blame, that they were born that way, but just the same he can't help an inner congratulation, expressing itself in an outer smugness that the Lord made him different.

Can You?

Do you remember one of the conditions of Kipling's "If" that bears on this tendency:

"If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating
And yet don't look too good or talk too wise."

I do not think there is any harder condition of Kipling's "If"—is not too serious minded, but just enough so to be a good citizen and just little enough so as to be a good companion. And what better combination, when you come right down to it, could you get?

POOR LITTLE LADY MUST STAND ON HER HEAD

Many a dainty little lady is going to be left out in the rain, but that's the way of these new parasols, just over. To camouflage the ungainly stub end of an umbrella the latest ones have a little fluffy doll perched up on top and oh me, oh my, when the umbrella is closed up she'll be left standing on her head for days and days.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

We all have bad habits. Some of us sit in our bath every morning singing the same hymn; others scratch their noses; there is no limit to the annoying things we do, and the art of marriage is to get over them. But one thing one never gets over is what one may call fuss. Men are sometimes fussy, particularly as they grow old, but in the case of some women the plague hits them hard, indeed, never lets them alone.

The unfortunate fussy woman is always in a state of excitement and worry. The groceries have not arrived. Yes, she knows it is only ten o'clock and that they won't be wanted till twelve, but supposing they didn't arrive. Where are the railroad tickets? In her husband's breast pocket. Now, is he going to lose them? (She takes the railroad tickets and loses them). Oh dear Charlie looks so flushed, she's sure he's feverish. The temperature is taken. Ninety-eight. The thermometer must be wrong. "Charlie! don't break that thermometer." She is always in a hurry, always troubled; a frown settles between her eyebrows. She never has any time Everything falls upon her shoulders. In fact she has no more troubles than any other woman except those which she creates for herself. She is fussy. Now fussy people never realize the scourge they are to themselves and to others. But if they are told, they can do away with their disease. They can learn to speak slowly, which leads them to think coolly; they can learn to do things slowly, which means that they are better done. Just as one should turn one's words seven times before speaking, so should one turn one's hand before doing.

As We Pass Along

BY MARY COTTON

DISSATISFIED.

Are you dissatisfied? If you aren't you ought to be; if you are satisfied, you should take a day off right now and find out what is wrong.

Mr. Carl Akeley, who invented the first naturalist moving picture camera for photographing wild animals in their native haunts, said of his first opportunity to test and find successful his invention, "I was satisfied. More satisfied than any man ever should be." Really big men are never satisfied.

A state of dissatisfaction is the most glorious state of mankind, the unhappiest and most irritating or the happiest and most gratifying.

Some state of being, isn't it? And one we have all experienced often but probably failed to appreciate to its fullest. One which failed to register clearly and so was thrown in the discard instead of being filed among our valuables. Was set down on the side of "loss" when it should have gone under the head of "profit."

If you are satisfied, you had better stop, look and listen; there is danger ahead, serious danger, so serious, in fact, as to likely tie up all action, and count you out on the first round when you should only be getting warmed up for the fight.

Being satisfied with our accomplishments and progress is the most serious symptom we can have of going into a decline, for when we are content and feel that we have gained all that is necessary, we may be sure we have about gained all we ever shall.

It doesn't matter at what stage of the game this self-satisfaction sets in, the result is the same, arrested progress. It may come early, before much has been accomplished, or it may be after much has been done, but no matter at what stage it begins to creep in let's be on our guard and call its bluff at its first appearance.

So let's remember that the first signs of satisfaction are our danger signals; there is something wrong, and so stop and take inventory of our stock in trade and see if we are yet ready to retire from business.

Let's encourage dissatisfaction, not a state of chronic unhappiness, but one of desire to reach out further; grasp bigger things, do more and more; gain more and more, and ever fight the state of satisfaction which means arrested progress, loss of interest, unavoidable uselessness and consequent unhappiness.

Recital Given by Miss E. R. Lightfoot.

Miss Ellen Ross Lightfoot entertained at a recital at the Decatur school auditorium on Saturday evening. Miss Lightfoot is one of the talented students of Miss Duane Thomas Yould's expression class, and her dramatic numbers were greatly enjoyed by a capacity house of appreciative listeners.

Miss Lightfoot was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Pauline Montague and Mrs. Alfred B. Sherwood, soloists, who were accompanied by Miss Sutphin, of Agnes Scott college, and little Virginia Mayson and Elizabeth De Saussure, Grecian dancers.

Miss Myrtle Jones Weds E. C. Johnston.

Anniston, Ala., September 26.—Of interest to people in Alabama and Georgia was the marriage on September 20 of Miss Myrtle S. Jones, of Anniston, to Earl C. Johnston, formerly of Philadelphia, but now of Anniston. Rev. Earnest Barber, of the Presbyterian church of Carrollton, Ga., officiated at the ceremony.

Local Club Work Used as Model.

Recommendation for the creation of three new departments were made yesterday by the executive council of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs, according to action taken while in session at Nashville. The three departments recommended are for better films, for reduction of illiteracy in Tennessee and a junior department.

Mrs. M. N. Whitaker, of Chattanooga, was appointed chairman of the better films department; Mrs. R. B. Parker, of Knoxville, chairman for reduction of illiteracy, and Mrs. Walter L. Jones, of Nashville, chairman of the junior department.

Turner Jones, public relations representative of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., of Atlanta, Ga., spoke on the better films movement and urged the creation of this new department.

Mrs. Whitaker, in accepting the chairmanship of this department, declared that she had received her inspiration and guidance from the work done by the Atlanta better films committee and stated that she would pursue a similar course of action in organizing the state of Tennessee.

Mrs. Meintzer Weds Mr. Salter.

The marriage of Mrs. Amelia Meintzer and Hubert R. Salter took place Saturday, September 23, at the Ponce de Leon apartments. Dr. J. S. Lyons, pastor First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

Registration for Vocation Classes.

Registration for the Smith-Hughes vocational classes to be conducted by the division of vocational classes of the home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club will be open to applicants today, registration beginning at 9:30 o'clock and closing at 5 p. m. All interested should register and pay tuition at this time as inquiries indicate that all classes will be filled at once.

The registration will be in charge of Mrs. O. H. Matthews, chairman of the division of vocational classes, who will be assisted by Mrs. T. G. Delph, chairman of cooking classes, Mrs. George Roberts, chairman of sewing, and Mrs. Ernest Covington, chairman of millinery. No registrations will be accepted over the phone.

Miss Bell Honored By Miss Gamble.

The guests were a few intimate friends of Miss Bell, and included the following: Miss Leila Ponder, Miss Joyce White, Miss Gartine Gilbert, Miss Eloise Lewis, Miss Marie Porter, Miss Louise de Lorenzi, of Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. Allan Jernigan.

Mrs. Merriam Is Hostess.

Mrs. Frank Merriam was hostess, Tuesday, at a bridge-tea at her home in Ansley Park in honor of her guest, Mrs. Jack Baldwin, of Miami, Fla.

The honor guest received a pair of silk hose, and French novelties were given the winners of top score and consolation prizes.

Tea was served after the game in the palm room.

Mrs. Merriam was gowned in black crepe and wore a black hat.

Mrs. Baldwin wore henna lace over henna taffeta.

Mrs. Lee Lindsley Entertains at Tea.

Mrs. Lee Lindsley entertained very delightfully at tea, Tuesday afternoon, at her home in Ansley Park, in honor of Miss Louise Campbell, a bride-elect of October and Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris, Jr.

Early fall flowers and greens decorated the attractive home. In the dining room, the colors of green and white predominated. A large silver basket filled with blooms formed the centerpiece, and silver candlesticks with green candles alternated with silver compotes of green and white mints.

Besides the honor guests, there were receiving with the hostess the following: Mrs. Eugene Harrington, Mrs. Edward Pugh and Mrs. Frank Spratlin.

Miss Lambright Gives Bridge-Tea.

Miss Lala Lambright gave a bridge-tea at her home on East Fifth street, Tuesday, for Miss Idelle Palmour, bride-elect.

She was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. W. E. Lambright, Mrs. Kate Williams, Mrs. Paul Beauchamp and Miss Elizabeth Palmour.

Mrs. Harvey Will Be Hostess at Tea.

Mrs. R. W. Harvey will be hostess at afternoon tea on October 2 at her home in Williams Mill road.

THE HOME IN GOOD TASTE

By Harold Donaldson Eberlein

No. 72—Breakfast Room and Dining Room.

Should a home admit of its presence, a breakfast room is most desirable. Here one may indulge a taste for brilliant color, both in drapery and gaily painted furniture. Many mornings are gray, and they should be enlivened by clear and warm color used in combination with simplicity of design.

One may have birds here, in delightful Chinese cages, goldfish darting about in a clear glass bowl in the sun, and growing ferns. These add a tonic to the morning outlook upon life.

The dining room may then be furnished in a more formal spirit—quiet walls, paneled in wood or treated with paint or even a good paper, must always form only a background for the group at the table.

The table, dressers or buffets, serving tables and cabinets, should be very carefully balanced. A screen should mask the serving door of the room. The lighting should be sufficient, but not glaring. Fall scenes with shaded lights, supplemented by real candles on the table, form the ideal lighting arrangement.

If, however, a light above the table is desired, let it, by all means, be so placed, that, while lighting the table, adequately, it is shaded so as to screen the eyes of the diners. An electric light shining in one's eyes nullifies the pleasure in the best of dinners and the most beautiful rooms.

Methodist Guild To Meet.

The guild of First M. E. church will meet at residence of Mrs. W. O. Alston, 60 Andrews avenue, on Friday, September 29, at 3 o'clock.

The INVISIBLE HUSBAND

By Marguerite Hurter

Author of "Busy Eyes"

INSTALLMENT NO. 3.

Who's Who in the Story.

Phyliss Gay, a movie queen, who has earned a million for every dimple, and flaunts her extravagance before the public.

Bertie Reeves, press agent for Star Film company.

Madame Marie, a Fifth avenue modiste, whose name is really Mrs. McGinty. She pays a salary of $14 per week to Deborah Lynch, a little needl. girl, who works overtime until fter midnight on a gown of Phyliss Gay's, and then begs to be permitted to deliver the box.

The taxi driver overcharges Deb; she decides to borrow a dollar from Miss Gay, but forgets everything when she is invited to have refreshments at a party Phyliss is giving for her movie friends.

"Big Brown Eyes."

By the time Deborah had finished the lemonade, Bertie and Phyliss returned, all flushed and happy.

"How's the drink?" Bertie demanded jovially. "Sure you don't want a stick in it?"

"Stick?"

"I should say not! What's the matter with you?" Phyliss objected, but Deborah thought Bertie only meant a straw; for a long time after that, whenever Deb ordered an ice cream soda, she called a straw a stick—she thought it fashionable.

There were less than a dozen guests at the studio party—all of them worse than informal! One girl had taken off her slippers because, she said, they hurt, and Bertie dared her to do a barefoot dance! Then the fat man suggested that Phyliss try on her new gowns and show them how she could vamp in "Souls Lost," or "The Reason She Never Went Back Home."

"I wish you wouldn't make fun of my scenario," a rather pasty-looking young man objected. "And I certainly do not think the costumes should be exposed, my dear Phyliss."

Phyliss tweeked him under the chin, and laughed as she put away the package of gowns. "All right, Bennie, don't be so nervous! Gosh, these darn scenario writers are the limit!"

To Deborah she remarked, "This is the way I gotta humor everybody day and night—from the press agent to the scenario writers. Next I'll be boarding-and-rooming the camera man! Have some more cake?"

"No; thanks," Deborah smiled happily.

"All right, run along, then! It's time a little chick like you was in bed."

"You—you're awfully nice, Miss Gay," Deb tried to utter. "—You don't know what it means to me to be here and look you right in the face like this—you're so good and beautiful—and everything!"

Something like a tear shone in Phyliss' eye as Bertie put his arm about her waist to draw her away; but—"Good night, babe! You're a sweet, little kid," is all Phyliss said as Deborah crept out into the dim hall.

* * * * *

For a second Deb waited outside the door to hear another dance record go on the victrola. Then the voice of Phyliss, a little sad and serious, exclaimed—

"Well, you can all laugh and make fun of the kid if you want to! But there was something about them big, brown eyes that got me. Reminded me of when I was an orphan and—"

Bertie interrupted gaily. "Phyliss, you're getting maudlin! Have some wine—cheer up! Who cares about orphans, anyway? The kid probably has a father and mother on the east side, and thirteen or fourteen dirty brothers and sisters."

"I tell you I was once a kid like that myself. I looked just as bad if not worse! I know what it is not to have enough to eat, nor enough clothes to keep you warm!"

"Ssh! Ssh! Do you want the whole world to know you were once—?"

"Yes," Phyliss cried hysterically. "I want the whole world to know that I was once a decent little kid. I worked hard. I was a—"

"Sh-h! Phyliss—this will never do!" the fat man drawled.

"But it's gotta do! I want to tell the truth about myself for once! I'm tired of all this monkey business!"

Angrily now the fat voice taunted—"All right then, my fine lady, tell them what you were!"

Phyliss sobbed: "I was a poor girl—a manicurist, that's what! I worked hard; but I had nothing to worry me then—nothing to be ashamed of!"

"She's all hysterical—needs sleep, I guess," Bertie soothed, but Phyliss continued to sob—

"I tell you them big, brown eyes—so innocent and everything! The way she said to me, 'Miss Gay, you're so good—so beautiful and everything!'"

There was laughter. Hard, unpleasant laughter. But a woman's voice, more kind than the rest, said gently:

"Phyliss, dear, you really must send everyone home—you need rest!"

That sent Deborah hurrying to the elevator. She didn't wish the departing guests to discover her eavesdropping! She would have been amazed though, to know that the lady with the kindest voice was actually the one that had her slippers off!

"Going down!"

The elevator shot Deborah down to solid earth. The dream was over! She had done her little errand, delivered the gowns for "Souls Lost," and beyond her wildest expectations, she had learned more about the real character of Phyliss Gay, than the best movie magazines had ever conveyed.

How could the public be expected to believe that the beauteous Phyliss Gay was once a manicurist who put such excellent technique on the nails of a certain moving picture producer, that the fat and prosperous gentleman gave her a chance!

Phyliss Gay a manicurist! A poor girl!

But why had she cried? Surely it was better to be a movie star, to live in an elegant apartment with your parlor looking over the river, to have parties where you danced with handsome men in real dress suits!

Deborah could not understand Phyliss! Was it her fault she cried? She looked down upon her skimpy, little black suit and regretted that she should have looked so shabby as to make her charming hostess weep.

The hall clock was just striking 2 as Deborah emerged from the brocaded elevator. Two o'clock in the morning! And here she was away up Riverside Drive with not enough money to pay for a taxi! She had forgotten, after all, to mention the loan of a dollar to Miss Gay. One couldn't think of mercenary things when Phyliss Gay was around, thought Deb. . . . as she started to walk down the dark street.

She figured that she might walk part of the way and pick up a taxi around Seventy-second street. The fare from there would be less than 83 anyway!

The river looked blacker, and more sordid than it had seemed from the warm interior of the taxicab. Somehow Deb began to think of all the murders and suicides that had occurred on Riverside Drive! She was not afraid, she assured herself, but with every gust of wind she shivered, and into every shadow she crept more miserably.

An automobile or two passed, but no taxi! A man coming in the other direction looked at though he might be about to annoy her. Deborah made to cross the street; the honk of an automobile horn frightened her back to the curb. Instead of passing her by, however, a very smart town car stopped for salutation, and before Deborah could realize what was happening, a very handsome young man was suggesting cordially, "If you've missed your bus, I'll drive you home."

Deborah stood dumb. Swiftly to her mind came all the stories of girls who had ventured in strange automobiles, but what could she do with that awful man waiting on the other corner? And this young man already opening the door of the car so politely. Deb got into the automobile.

(Another fine installment of this story tomorrow.)

THE bottom rungs are badly overcrowded, but there is still plenty of room at the top.

What is it that has lifted others—and can lift you—to a higher place upon life's ladder?

Abundant energy for every-day use, and ample reserve energy for emergencies.

If you have the ambition to succeed, and want to keep your whole body charged with driving energy, feed your body scientifically. In place of heavy, starchy, too highly seasoned dishes, eat food such as Grape-Nuts, which supplies unusual nourishment to all the body tissues without overtaxing the digestion or clogging the system with poisonous waste matter.

Eaten with good milk or cream, Grape-Nuts is a complete food, particularly rich in mineral elements—which are so necessary for normal and vigorous development.

The sturdy nutriment of wheat and malted barley is made easily digestible by more than 20 hours' baking which also accounts for that distinctive charm of flavor found only in Grape-Nuts.

Where you don't find Grape-Nuts, you won't find people!

Fine Programs To Be Given at Saturday Matinee

Unusual interest centers in the boys' and girls' movie programs scheduled for Saturday morning at the Howard and Alpha theaters, sponsored by the Better Films committee, of Atlanta. Mrs. Porter Langston, chairman of selected performances, is responsible for a particularly fine program for each theater.

At the Howard two pictures vie for first interest in point of attraction. "Trouble," featuring Jackie Coogan, and an educational drama, "The Story of Columbus," will share equal honors. In "Trouble," Jackie Coogan is said to provoke much laughter. The picture is entertaining from start to finish, according to the report of the committee that reviewed it, and they declare that Atlanta boys and girls are fortunate in having this picture at their performance. "The Story of Columbus" is told in a dramatic fashion, true to text and full of color and action.

An additional treat for this performance will be the Camp Fire Girls of the North Avenue school, led by Miss Darwin, who will sing campfire songs and dance in Indian costumes.

Mrs. W. P. Lemmon, chairman of chaperonage; Mrs. Porter Langston, Mrs. A. J. Stewart, and Mrs. W. L. McAuley, will act as chaperons. The performance starts at 10 o'clock.

All children who attend the Alpha for the next several weeks will have the opportunity of winning the child's coupe, which has been on display before the theater. The last episode of Captain Kidd will be shown Saturday morning. Great interest has been manifested in the new serial which started last Saturday, "The Days of Buffalo Bill." This will continue for several weeks. "Victory and Happiness," and "Roars and Uproars" conclude the program, which will start at 9:30. Mrs. G. H. Guy and Mrs. Ellis Barrett will chaperon.

Study Class Meeting Postponed.

The meeting of the West End Study class has been postponed from Wednesday to Friday morning at 10:45 o'clock. The Misses Tucker, 250 Lee street, will entertain at that time.

Supper to Be Given By Chi Zeta Chi.

The Atlanta Alumni chapter of the Chi Zeta Chi Medical fraternity will entertain the student members of Alpha-Alpha chapter, Emory university, at a buffet supper on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of Dr. Calhoun McDougall, 15 The Prado, Ansley Park.

Shower for Bride-Elect.

Miss Evelyn Cone and Miss Sue Robson entertained at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Robson in honor of Miss Lucia Robson, whose marriage to Dawson Smith, of Pittsburg, will be an event of October.

Early fall flowers were used to decorate the rooms where the guests assembled.

Anniversary Service At Lodge.

Decatur Rebekah lodge, No. 31, I. O. O. F., will hold an anniversary ceremony at the I. O. O. F. hall, East Court square, Decatur, Thursday evening, September 28. Members urged to be present. All visiting Rebekahs welcome.

An Unauthorized Announcement.

Mrs. L. O. Wright requests The Constitution to state that the announcement of the engagement of her daughter, Annie Clyde Wright, to Boyce M. Edens, which was published last Sunday, was unauthorized and was without the knowledge or consent of herself, her daughter, or Mr. Edens.

Music Club Will Entertain at Tea.

The Atlanta Music club will entertain, at a musical tea, Wednesday afternoon, from 4 to 6, at Habersham hall on Fifteenth street, near Piedmont avenue. All who are interested in music are invited.

It is announced that there will be an interesting musical program. Miss Annabelle Wood, pianist, and Miss Riley Aiken, soprano, will entertain the guests.

Mrs. De Los Hill, president of the club, will be assisted in receiving by the other officers, who are: Mrs. Cliff Hatcher, Mrs. Howard Candler, Mrs. George Wight, Miss Evelyn Jackson, Mrs. Katherine Connerat, Miss Nan Stephens, Mrs. Herbert Mattingly, Mrs. Rucker McCarthy, Mrs. Woolford, Miss Annabelle Wood, Mrs. Walter Bedard, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Miss Irene Smilie, Mrs. R. R. Bradley, Mrs. Frank Pogue and Miss Lula Clark King.

Miss Gamble Gives Matinee Party.

The guest list includes Miss Julia Bell, Miss Leila Ponder, Miss Joyce White, Miss Gartine Gilbert, Miss Eloise Lewis, Miss Marie Porter, Miss Louise de La Rinza, of Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. Allen Jernigan.

Grant Park P.-T. A. To Give Carnival.

The Grant Park Parent-Teacher association will give a carnival in the school building Friday, September 29, from 5 to 9 o'clock.

A very interesting program has been arranged. Other features of the evening will be a country store which will be filled with many articles for sale. A table of all kinds of hand made articles and useful things will be for sale.

A weiner stand which is a favorite among the kiddies will sell good hot-dogs. Also ice cream cones, candy, cakes and bottled drinks will be sold. A grab bag, fish pond and fortune telling will be among the many interesting things that are to take place.

An orchestra has been engaged for the evening which will add to the pleasure of every one who attends, so come and bring your friends and be sure your pockets are full of change so you can enjoy a big evening.

Miss Lewis to Give Tea for Miss Bell.

Miss Eloise Lewis will entertain at a bridge-tea Friday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock in honor of Miss Julia Bell, a bride-elect of October.

Miss Lewis will honor the bride and her party. Her guests, besides Miss Bell, will be Miss Leila Ponder, Miss Joyce White, Miss Eloise Lewis, Miss Gartine Gilbert, Miss Delphine Popham, Miss Marie Porter, and Miss Louise de Lorenzi, of Dallas, Texas.

Miss Bowman, Library Expert, Will Write on Children's Books

Photograph by Walton Reeves.

Miss Virginia Bowman, library expert and prominent young Atlanta woman, whose series of articles on Books for Children will be carried by The Constitution, beginning next Monday in the Woman's Magazine.

The Constitution announces a series of illustrated articles on "Books for Children" by Miss Virginia Bowman, expert librarian, formerly assistant to the supervisor of work with children of the New York public library system, the first of which series will appear next Monday as a feature of the Woman's Magazine of The Constitution.

The series is particularly appropriate as a preparation for the Children's National Book week in November, and Christmas shopping, which is not so terribly far off.

Miss Bowman brings to her subject several varieties of interest which will make the articles particularly readable as well as informational. She has a personal acquaintance with some of the most celebrated authors and illustrators of books for children as, for instance, Peter Newell, whose own autograph is a detail of the very attractive "lay out," with illustrations from his boks, which form the subject of the initial article.

Children and grown ups, too, will find her personal reminiscences are exceedingly snappy, and a happy anticipation of the newest editions to imaginative literature for the young folks. Indeed, she has been able to give her articles that charm which can best be described by referring to "Alice in Wonderland" with its almost greater appeal to the adult reader than the child.

There has been developed of late years a close union between the publishers and the leading librarians of the country, the publishers now calling on the librarians in the children's department not only to criticize books already written, but to make suggestions, out of their knowledge of the children's needs, both in instructive literature and that which is more distinctly for entertainment, as to books which it would be profitable to have written. Miss Bowman has done much of this reviewing and suggestion as a detail of her work with the New York library which has also been executive and advisory.

For the last six months she has been organizing children's departments in and around New York, acting as an advisor to the children's librarians of the public library system and lecturing to groups of librarians as well as the summer school of Columbia university and groups of teachers.

Her first article, "Nonsense Books for Children," which will appear Monday, October 2, will be illustrated by a signature portrait of Peter Newell and pictures from his "Pictures and Rhymes."

Miss Ollie Mauck Honored at Shower.

Miss Mary Starr and Mrs. C. E. Roberts were joint hostesses at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Starr, on Highland avenue, in honor of Miss Ollie Lee Mauck, a bride-elect.

The house was attractively decorated with hardy asters and other fall flowers.

About twenty guests were invited. These included: Miss Mauck, Miss Mamie Castles, Miss Frances Walsh, Miss Margaret Bryant, Miss Pearl Pittman, Miss Rosa Hensler, Miss Grace Hussey, Miss Gladys Broome, Miss Mae Ivy, Miss Evelyn Henry, Miss Adelene Milledge, Miss Garnet Anderson, Mrs. L. L. Kimsey, Mrs. D. V. Rutledge, Mrs. Howard Parrish, Mrs. M. H. Everett, Mrs. O. F. Starr, Mrs. Roberts and Miss Starr.

Nellie Peters Black Kindergarten Meeting.

The Mothers' club of the Nellie Peters Black free kindergarten held their first meeting of the year on Friday afternoon, September 22, with a large number of mothers present. This first meeting was in the nature of a welcome party and there was no set program. Mrs. Ingram, the president, welcomed the old and new mothers, and the spirit of loyalty and harmony, two of the strongest motives in this club, manifested itself all through the afternoon.

Mrs. Jolly, the supervisor, gave an outline of the program to be used during the year. She gave a short history of the founder of this work, Froebel, and she said the same plan was used today as that advocated by Froebel, the four sided development of the child. A chart will be kept of each child and every month the child will be weighed and measured. A pair of scales will be the next equipment added to the supplies. A benefit party will be given Friday evening, September 29, at 8 p. m. at the kindergarten. Bridge, rook, dominoes or any game one wishes to play will be the attraction. Friends of the kindergarten are urged to take a table. $1 per table or 25 cents per person. Those reserving tables are requested to furnish cards.

Piedmont W. C. T. U. Holds Meeting.

The regular business meeting of the Piedmont W. C. T. U. met at the First M. E. church Friday afternoon, September 22, at 3 o'clock. The president being absent, Mrs. E. G. Thomas, vice president, presided. This being the time for election of officers for another year the following were elected: President, Mrs. D. S. Goodrich; vice president, Mrs. E. G. Thomas; recording secretary, Mrs. T. J. Akridge; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. A. Hathcock; treasurer, Mrs. George H. Sims. Mrs. W. J. Radcliffe was appointed publicity superintendent; Mrs. T. A. Hathcock and Mrs. W. J. Radcliffe were elected delegates to the state convention which convenes at Douglasville, October 18 to 20.

The other delegates who will attend by virtue of their office are, Mrs. Leela Dillard, state president; Mrs. Goodrich, president of Piedmont union, and Mrs. W. F. Trenary, county president.

Tech Faculty Will Sponsor Scrip Dance

The faculty of Georgia Tech will sponsor the dances to be given throughout the winter by the Tech students at Segadlos, the first to take place Friday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Brittain, Major and Mrs. A. L. Pendleton, and Major and Mrs. R. F. Gibson, the men belonging to the faculty, will give the dances their personal attention in order that they will be rightly conducted and properly chaperoned.

Others who will act as chaperones are Mrs. Charles Northern, Mrs. Willie Van Winkle, Mr. and Mrs. John O. DuPree, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Orme, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis.

Miss Colding to Teach in Madrid.

Savannah, Ga., September 25.—(Special.)—Miss Vera Colding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Colding, of this city, now is on her way to Madrid to begin her duties as a member of the faculty of the University of Madrid. She will have charge of the chemical laboratory of the international school for girls, University of Madrid.

Miss Colding distinguished herself notably in chemistry in Vassar and has been in Honduras for some time as assistant to the representative of the department of state in a financial survey made of that country. She later accepted a position as an international secretary of the Young Men's Christian association. Miss Colding is a graduate of the old Pape & West school at Savannah, and of Horace Mann school in New York, later taking her degree at Vassar.

Mrs. Ashby to Lecture This Evening.

An instructive and helpful lecture on healing will be given by Mrs. Ashby this evening at 8 o'clock, in the lecture room of the Carnegie library. Methods used in mental and spiritual healing will be interpreted.

The public is invited to attend.

THE FACE IN THE MIRROR

Your face, does it wear the contented expression of good health, or are the features drawn and pallid? In the latter case, your story is read by all who see you, and what woman of spirit wants to be pitied for her physical condition? There is a way to get the nervous, tired lines out of your face and the slump out of your body. The use of that standard remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, will strengthen the nerves and tone up the system to resist that excessive fatigue.—(adv.)

Budd-Welling Fight Is Toss-Up Declare Atlanta Ring Experts

Predicted That the Largest Crowd of Year Will Watch Lightweights in Action Thursday.

Tomorrow night at the Auditorium, where Battling Budd will meet Joe Welling of Chicago, patrons of the fisticuffing game who like their scrapping fast and furious, are in for a real treat. Welling is one of the fastest men in the ring, possibly the best of the lightweights with the exception of Benny Leonard.

He has whipped most of the other real contenders, most of them more than once, and with Atlanta's well known proclivity of patronizing the real top-notchers of the ring, Welling and Budd should draw the largest house of the year tomorrow night.

The mere fact that Battling Budd has guaranteed Welling his money and agreed to take what is left is not sufficient reason to ask fight patrons to turn out for the bout. But when Budd is going better than at any time in his ring career, having polished off Mell Coogan, Red McLachlan and several others who were anything but easy marks in the ring, and when he has a real chance to polish off one of the greatest lightweights in the game and make himself a real attraction in the east and in the north, it seems to be largely up to Atlanta fight patrons to turn out and give him a rousing send-off.

Budd Has Chance.

In the past when a real headliner has been billed in Atlanta, generally he was sent against a fighter who had but little if any chance of knocking him off. But with Budd stepping like he is now, and with a man of Welling's caliber to furnish the opposition, one of the greatest fights that Atlanta has ever seen looks to be the portion of those who go to the Auditorium tomorrow night.

The betting fraternity see that the fight is well made. They are offering the man his pick of the fighters and laying even money. This is one of the best ways there is to judge a fight before it starts—or before it's over.

Many of Budd's admirers, when they heard that he was making 138 at 3 o'clock for Welling, were afraid that taking off what they thought was several pounds would weaken the battler. Budd stepped on the scales yesterday afternoon and weighed 136 pounds, which is enough under so that he can eat regularly and not have to dry out and weaken himself on the day of the fight.

"I'll be in there strong as ever," Budd stated yesterday afternoon, "and I have a hunch that I'm going to be faster than usual. This will help me with a man like Welling, because he is fast himself."

"How do you figure your chance?" Budd was asked.

This not worrying is a mighty good sign. Budd is never whipped before he goes in the ring, and it is only at rare intervals that he is whipped after he gets into the ring. He is a great fighter, without question, and one that will even yet make a great name for himself.

Good Preliminaries.

Three other attractive bouts have been arranged to complete the card. Jack Denham meets a new comer in Atlanta rings in Paul Thomas. Thomas is from south Georgia and he has been fighting several of the heavier men in that section and giving a fine account of himself. They meet over the eight-round route.

Kid Lavigne, the veteran, who has made many friends by his clever ring tactics and fine sportsmanship, will meet the promising Young Bob Martin in an eight-round encounter.

Johnny Kid Nappie, who has worked up quite a reputation as a "socker," will get a real workout when he goes on with Kid Cy Young. These two have never met, and while there is nothing in the nature of a grudge between the two, there has been a lot of talk on both sides and both will be in there trying all the time.

The attractiveness of the bill has caused a larger advance sale of the better seats than usual but there are a number of fine seats still available. The down-town stands have been selling seats since Monday. These places have been arranged in order to accommodate those who would rather not stand in line for their ducats at the Auditorium on the night of the fight.

There has been no advance in prices and the Rex, Chess', Julian Prade's and the Capital City club have tickets for those who desire to do their shopping early. Ladies will be admitted free, as is the custom, and boys in knee trousers will be admitted for half-price.

Giants Complimented.

ENDS WORRY TIGER COACH

BY EMMETT SIZEMORE.

Auburn, Ala., September 26.—(Special.)—While "Hardboy" Pruitt and "Slick" Moulton seem to have the flank positions cinched for the season at Auburn, much anxiety is lurking around the end jobs. Willard Sitz who has been called on to hold down the wing position under heavy fire is a likely youngster to break down opposing interference aimed in his direction.

Joe Harrison and Batch Ollinger are two other scrappers that have made a specialty of turning back interference and may cause worry on the ends in future contests.

Monday night the squad met in the gymnasium for "skull practice," as it is familiarly known, and the coaches pointed out the loose cogs of last Saturday's games with the Marion institute team and offered suggestions as to methods of tightening up on the loose mechanism which is usually evident in early season games.

Charlie Scott is being missed on the Plainsmen line-up, the fleet half having sustained a sprained knee in scrimmage last week. Fox Howe was another to report to Coach Hutsell's training corps, after Saturday's argument, with a rather bad charley horse.

Coach Donahue announced a scrimmage with Coach Newell's freshman teams which is expected Wednesday afternoon at which time the varsity will be given the task of working on the defensive against the 40 odd freshmen.

DIXIE TITLE GAME TODAY

Mobile, Ala., September 26.—Mobile and Fort Worth baseball teams today are en route to the latter place where the All-Dixie championship will be resumed Wednesday afternoon. Accompanying the two teams that came to Mobile from Fort Worth and a delegation of about 25 local fans who left last night on a special train for Fort Worth.

Despite the long train journey from Mobile to Fort Worth it was the opinion of members of both clubs that the rest today will give the two teams a needed rest. Four games were played here, three of which were fought until early nightfall.

Mobile, by winning three games and tieing one during the series here, only has one more game to win to take the championship of the south.

The Bears will stop over a while today in New Orleans where Southern league fans there, according to word received here tonight, plan to accord the Niehoffers a warm reception.

Victories by Pope and Acosta have solved Manager Niehoff's pitching problem. By Wednesday "Dutch" Henry, Charley Fulton, and even "Lefty" Fuhr will be ready to go right back in there against the Panthers. Pitcher Joe Pate will be Manager Atz's main dependence Wednesday as the Bears kept the Panther hurlers in a steady march to the "showers" during their stay in Mobile.

New Haven Wins.

New Haven, Conn., September 26. New Haven evened the series with the Baltimore Orioles for the minor league championship of the east by winning today's game, 11 to 7. Errors played a big part in the victory of the Eastern league champions, although the winners forced the issue at all times. Home runs by McAvoy and Styles of Baltimore were a feature. The deciding game will be played tomorrow.

AGGIES PLAY AT WOFFORD

BY I. B. EVANS.

Dahlonega, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—With only one more day for practice to put them in final trim, the North Georgia Aggies are working as they have never worked before. They will meet Wofford college at Spartanburg next Friday.

Coach Amsler's entire program this week has been work and then more work. Following a workout Monday to get the soreness out of their muscles as a result of the set-to Saturday with Clarkesville, the squad was put through the hardest scrimmage Tuesday afternoon that they have had. After this free-for-all, signal running, passing, punting and skull practice will be the chief occupation of the warriors until they depart Thursday on their first trip into foreign territory.

And judging from all reports that have drifted into the Aggie headquarters, it is well that they have worked this week as they have never worked before. Last year they suffered defeat at the hands of the South Carolinians and this time as they go to meet the rival on his own field, they are going to meet foes worthy of their steel.

Varsity in Shape.

In the battle Saturday both Coaches Amsler and Baker had an opportunity to look over the entire squad while in action. In the first part of the fray the varsity as it probably will appear in Saturday's game was functioning in grand style. After, however, things had settled down and the veterans had had time to run up a safe margin they were pulled out and the scrubs and new material were given a chance to perform, thereby giving the varsity an opportunity to get a view of the plays from the sideline.

From indications seen in the playing Saturday the backfield is running in the same old style and although there is much room for improvement, they will be well enough balanced to bear watching. Meaders and Holden were the two halves that showed up in the first half of the game with the A. & M. aggregation, while Dorsey, Wilson and Phillips displayed the brand of football in the latter half that will merit attention when the time comes for choosing the team for the fracas next Friday, while at full and quarter Captain Brookshire, Nesbit and Hollis will be the three from which these two positions will be filled.

Scrap in Line.

On the line there is one continuous scrap for berths. At guard and tackle positions, "Red" Williamson, Lumpkin, Rhodes, Skelton, Smith, Blake, McWilliams and Swafford are doing the best work on the line that has been done in many moons. At end, Parham, "Andy" Williamson and Young are the three men that are showing some real tactics at this position. Jackson and Stephens both did good work in the Clarkesville game Saturday. From these men the team will be chosen for next Friday's game at Wofford. Also Swafford, the Monroe A. & M. grid warrior who reported for practice Friday, will probably go with the team.

The injured men who will not be eligible for the lineup are: Ridgeway, who sustained a dislocated shoulder at the first of the season, and hawkins, a fast little halfback who has also been out for several days on account of a bad shoulder. Injuries have been slight thus far and it is hoped that this jinx that plays such havoc with any squad can be kept away from the Aggies.

MISS. AGGIES GET STARTED

Agricultural College, Miss.—Although A. & M. is somewhat later in getting under way than other schools, due to late opening of college, no time is lost in getting down to hard work and over 60 candidates have been undergoing a thorough drill in fundamentals, kicking, passing, blocking and tackling every afternoon since regular practice began last Monday on Scott field.

With ten letter men back from last year's squad and Blair, Huff and Lane from the 1920 squad, it is a certainty that there will be plenty of competition for the places on the 1922 squad as this group of letter men will have to fight to hold their places over some 40 other ambitious youngsters, many of whom have had some game experience as members of the 1920 and 1921 squads. In fact, the material this year appears to be remarkably well balanced.

There are no especially brilliant stars to be seen on the horizon, but early season indications point to a well balanced team with strength pretty evenly divided between the backfield and the line. In the backfield McGowan, Davis, Clark, Perkins, Cameron, Luckett and Sudduth are returned from last year's team, the only losses being Hough and Little, halfbacks. In the line, Mott, Barnett and Low, tackles; Gatchell, center, and Pete Noble, end, are left from last year's forwards and it is expected that Jacob, end and tackle, will report the first of next week.

Star Linesmen.

Joe Hooker Huff, guard, and Steve Blair, center, both of whom have had two years' experience of the varsity, will go a long ways toward plugging the gaps left by the graduation of Askew, Wilson and Minyard and the absence of McKenzie, who finds it impossible to return to college this year because of financial reasons. Lane, a sub-tackle and center in 1920, is another candidate who promises to make his presence felt on the field, while Saunders, another member of the 1919 squad is counted on to put up a strong bid for a backfield berth. Other members of last year's squad who show promise of developing into first string men this season are Tommy Lynch, Myers, Hubbard, Jones, Stennis and the two heavyweights, Henson and Burwell.

At end Noble and Jacob, who wound up the season as the regular ends last year, will doubtless have a hard fight to hold their places over Turner, Fleming, Stone and Adams. Turner is a strapping 180 pounder who starred on the baseball team last spring and who has taken to football like the proverbial duck to the pond. Fleming and Adams did good work on the reserves last year and both have shown great improvement this year. Stone was one of the best men on the class teams last year and will have to be considered before the final selection of the wing men is made. In the backfield, Young, Emmerich and Dawson from the reserves, and Wisner, Crumpton, Amacker, Gully, Chapman, Connelly and Mosley from the class teams are fighting hard for regular berths.

Although the first game is only two weeks off, Coach Noble is planning to take plenty of time to give all of the material a thorough try out before deciding upon a definite lineup.

Strib Meets Winner.

Savannah, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—The winner of the Good-Amato 12-round bout here Thursday night of this week will, it is announced today, meet Young Stribling, of Macon, the resultant fight to be staged a fortnight following this week's bout.

VELGUTH AFTER MORE GOLF HONORS

Yakima, Wash., September 26.—Arthur Velguth, of Spokane, claimant of the marathon golf championship of the world, through his playing of 22 rounds of golf in a single day, is after new laurels. During opening play of the state golf championship here, he played a round of the 2,632-yard Yakima Country club course in 41 strokes and 31 minutes flat.

The feat was considered remarkable not alone for the time taken but because the score of seven over par was better than those of some professionals in the tournament. The course is usually played in 75 minutes.

YANCEY DOGS WIN HONORS

Among the prize winners at the Tennessee State Fair national dog show, held at Nashville last week, was an Atlantan's brace of exhibition, rough-coated, sable and white collies, owned by Charles J. Yancey, proprietor Southland Kennels, 1382 DeKalb avenue, Atlanta.

Southern, Supremacy and Lochcairn Lustrous, two of Mr. Yancey's best show dogs were entered at this event, taking five firsts, special and winner's prize, winning same in the American-bred, limit, open (sable and white), open (any color) and brace clases. Lochcairn Lustrous won for best female in the show and annexed an added point towards her American championship medal offered by the American Kennel club.

Mr. Yancey also announced that his collies were on exhibition at the Kentucky State fair bench show of the Louisville Kennel club, held in Louisville a week previous to the Nashville event, where they were awarded two first prizes and blue ribbons in the American-bred and brace classes, and two third prizes in American-bred and open classes.

Other Atlanta dogs scoring high at the Nashville Kennel club fixture were the string of Airedales owned by R. W. McRoberts, of the Brookhaven Kennels, Atlanta, who took winner's male and female, and also reserve winner's female. Mr. McRoberts handled and showed Mr. Yancey's collies at Nashville, and W. Lovelace Godby, of Louisville, Ky., was in charge of their showing at the Louisville show.

Messrs. Yancey's and McRobert's dogs have been entered for the Atlanta Kennels club's dog show, to be held here on October 20 and 21 during the last days of the Southeastern fair.

HORSE "DOPERS" HAVE LICENSES WITHDRAWN

Paris, September 26.—The French racing authorities have withdrawn the licenses of two trainers on charges of "doping" horses at the Deauville races last month. They are Thomas Murphy, head of the American stable at Poissy, and Alexandre Baschkireff. In addition to losing their licenses the men were fined 500 francs each, and the horses in question were distanced.

In the case of another trainer, H. E. Leigh, an American who has become a naturalized Frenchman, a stable lad admitted administering a pill to the horse. The authorities, holding Leigh responsible for his employees, fined him 5,000 francs and distanced the horse, but did not suspend the trainer's license. The stable boy was barred from all French tracks.

FIGHT OFFERS BESIEGE SIKI

New York, September 26.—Battling Siki, the Senegalese boxer who has risen to sudden pugilistic fame by his knockout of Georges Carpentier, was besieged today by offers from New York fight promoters for bouts with American opponents here. His manager, M. Hellers, has at least three propositions under consideration.

Tex Rickard, after receiving a cablegram from Hellers expressing willingness to bring Siki to this country after January 1, cabled an offer to match the Senegalese with any prominent light-heavyweight, including Harry Greb, the American title holder; Gene Tunney, former champion, or Tom Gibbons, St. Paul boxer. Rickard, however, said he had made no financial proposition to Siki and would not do so pending reply.

In addition Dave Driscoll, matchmaker for Ebbets field, has cabled an offer of $100,000 to Siki to box Harry Wills, negro challenger for Jack Dempsey's heavyweight title on October 12, and Thomas F. O'Rourke, match-maker for the Republic A. C., has put in a bid of $25,000 for a contest with either Wills or Greb, preferrably the latter, sometime in October at the Polo grounds.

Meanwhile, the only indication of Siki's attitude toward any of these offers was contained in cable dispatches quoting his manager as rejecting O'Rourke terms and demanding 1,100,000 francs or $83,000 at the current rate of exchange for the African's end of the purse.

The agreed opinion in boxing circles was that if the Senegalese agrees to box in this country it will be against an opponent in the light-heavyweight class. Wills, weighing around 210 pounds, it was pointed out, would have an unusual advantage over the 174-pound Siki should they be matched.

Those who carry scandal are worse than those who make it.

MIGHT REVERSE CARP-SIKI VERDICT

Paris, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—The controversy over the dramatic finish of the Georges Carpentier-Battling Siki fight continues, and the former's manager, Descamps, persists in his appeals to the boxing federation for a reversal of the judges' decision awarding the championship to the Senegalese.

Many of those who have seen the motion picture films of the contest maintain that Carpentier was clearly tripped by his opponent. Victor Breye, one of the judges, is one of those taking this view, but he expressed the belief that such a foul by Siki could not have affected the outcome, as Carpentier was already a beaten man.

Some of the newspaper experts say it is possible the federation may yet award the bout to Carpentier. In any case Descamps is set upon having another meeting between his protege and Siki as soon as possible.

Georges now bears few marks of the beating he suffered, but his physicians are keeping him in bed because of his sprained ankle and fractured right hand. He broke the hand on Siki's skull.

He has a hard head, that negro, says Georges. "I was wrong in trying to get him by those hooks to the jaw." The majority of French sportsmen say Carpentier should retire, but only after a final match in which to re-establish his reputation as a brilliant fighter.

Durham Wins Pennant.

Durham, N. C., September 26.—The Durham club of the Piedmont league, today won the 1922 pennant by defeating High Point 4-0 in the eighth and final game of the league's post-season series. Rodgers, Durham's pitcher-outfielder, twirled brilliant ball and batted his club to the flag. Durham won four games of the series, High Point three, and one resulted in a 5-5 tie.

MISS HOLLINS LOSES GOLF TITLE IN FIRST ROUND

Defending Champion Loses First Two Holes And is Six Down to Her Opponent, Mrs. Q. F. Feitner, at End of First Nine.

FIRST ROUND RESULTS.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., September 26.—Results of the day's match play follows:

Mrs. Quentin S. Feitner, Southshore, defeated Miss Marion Hollins, Westbrook, 7 up and 6.

Miss Glenna Collett, Providence, defeated Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, Hutchinson, Kan., 6 up and 5.

Mrs. R. H. Barlow, Marion Cricket club, defeated Miss Kathleen Gorman, Parkersburg, W. Va., 6 up and 4.

Mrs. Norman Toerge, Nassau, defeated Mrs. Joseph Bydolek, East Aurora, 2 up and 1.

Mrs. David Gaut, Memphis, defeated Mrs. C. C. Russell, Milwaukee, 3 up and 2.

Mrs. Norman Hood, Wilmington, defeated Miss Louise Elkins, Oakmont, 7 up and 5.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Boston, defeated Miss Audrey Faust, St. Louis, 3 up and 1.

Mrs. Gilliam Gavin, England, defeated Miss Margaret Cameron, defeated Mrs. Caleb Fox, Hunting-Annandale, 1 up, 19 holes.

Mrs. C. C. Alexander, Exmoor, ton Valley, 2 up and 1.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., September 26.—Long Island's premier woman golfers met today on the Greenbriar course in the woman's national golf championship, with the result that Miss Marion Hollins, of West Brook, was eliminated from further play in the annual tournament and loses her crown. Her conqueror was Mrs. Quentin Feitner, of the Southshore club, six times Metropolitan champion who won 7 up and 6 to play.

The other well-known stars went through the first round of match play in consistent style, none failing to win her match and thereby continue in the tournament. The course was fast and the day ideal. The scores, for the most part, were low and some of the pairings were so close that it required the last putt on the last green to determine the winner. One match, Mrs. William Gavin, of England, the present Canadian women's champion, paired with Miss Margaret Cameron Annandale, required 19 holes for a decision, the English woman winning.

Miss Hollins, who won her title at Hollywood last year, has played little golf since because of illness and absence from this country. The lack of steady playing showed plainly, for she sliced her drives time after time, falling into bad lies, missed the greens on her approach shots and putted weakly. She lost the first two holes with scores of 6 and 7 and from then on the result scarcely was in doubt.

Never Lost Lead.

With a margin of six holes at the turn, Mrs. Feitner never failed to hold the lead. She played superbly, a game that was discouraging to her opponent because of the deadly accuracy of her drives, which seldom left the middle of the fairway and her strong approaches. Mrs. Feitner, who was nationally known as Miss Lillian Hyde, before her marriage, putted with remarkable steadiness and went through the match with only 2 putts on any green.

Playing sound and steady golf, Miss Glenna Collett, the well-known Providence player, had little trouble in defeating Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, Hutchinson, Kans., by a wide margin.

Miss Alexa Stirling, Atlanta, three times national champion, played excellently, while Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, winner of ten national titles, English, Scotch, Canadian and United States in former years, went through the first round about as had been expected.

BY E. ELLSWORTH GILES.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., September 26.—There was but a single championship possibility included among the list of the casualties in the first round of match play for the women's national championship here today.

Marion Hollins relinquished her claim to the title to an old opponent, Mrs. Quentin Feitner, of South Shore.

While this match was looked upon by all as having possibilities of a thriller, it soon developed into a hippodrome for Mrs. Feitner, partly through her own very excellent golf, and partly because the champion was not playing like a champion defending a title. Mrs. Feitner reached the turn six up and with the match won beyond all peradventure, Miss Hollins kept the match alive to the 12th hole; halving the 10th and 11th but capitulated at the 12th with a pickup after having played six shots and was still in a trap at the green's edge with Mrs. Feitner on the green in three.

Former Champion Miss Alexa Stirling, the pride of Atlanta, was moving along serenely and smoothly, winning through the merits of her own game which was fully up to championship requirements. Miss Stirling went in 40 and was 4 up on Miss Gordon, of Metacomet, and two extra holes to this total before the match ended 6 up and 4.

Miss Stirling's card:

Out ..... 563 446 435—40
In ..... 455—64

Hooking Occasionally.

The former champion was hooking occasionally from the tee, but her game otherwise was sound and convincing, presaging trouble for her future opponents. The draw indicates that Miss Stirling will meet Mrs. Gavin Thursday, and if such proves to be the case a great match is on the boards.

Both players are displaying a better brand of golf than they showed at Hollywood last fall. The memory of a defeat at the hands of Mrs Gavin in the Canadian championship will stir the fair Alexa to greater efforts.

Several good matches are on the boards for tomorrow. The Cummings-Gaut, the Collett-Harding and the Feitner-Hurd clashes will be particularly attractive. More than half of the remaining contestants have had championship tournament experience and may be expected from henceforth to deliver their best game because there is no longer fear of being beaten by an unknown player.

Mrs. David Gaut, the chairman of the women's committee in charge of the tournament made an 88 against Mrs. Russell.

Here is the score:

Gaut—
Out .....544 577 544—45
In .....646 554 454—43—88

Mrs. Gaut compiled the 7s on holes 5 and 6 but putting a ball out of bounds at each. The western champion's game was consistently good with the two exceptions mentioned.

Here is the score which eliminated the reigning champion and put Mrs. Feitner in line to further contest.

Feitner—

Wins First Two.

Mrs. Feitner took the first two holes by steady golf supplemented by the mistakes of her opponent. After halving the 220-yard third hole in a poor five, Mrs. Feitner started to play golf of the highest order. On the green in two to the up hill 390-yard fourth hole, Mrs. Feitner went down in the two orthodox putss for a win. The fifth hole was won in a par four through the merits of a very long masculined rive and with a putt of six feet. Miss Hollins failed to pitch and hold the green and the needed two putts for a five.

Mrs. Feitner lost the sixth hole, 430 yards and the only one of the match. From a fine drive she played a spoon second too close to wooded boundary edge and caught a projecting tree-top. From the impact the ball jumped well into the course, but she failed to accept the smile of fortune and muffed a third to finally get down in six for a loss as Miss Hollins had played the hole perfectly for a par five. Miss Holline threw all hope at the 390-yard seventh hole, when, after a wonderful drive, fully 40 yards in front of Mrs. Feitner she played an equally brilliant iron shot to the undulating green, only to overrun her aproach putt and miss coming back for a loss, because in the meantime Mrs. Feitner had followed her down center tee shot with a straight iron just short of the green, and chipped to within five feet and ran down the putt. Both players to the redan, 180 yards were short with iron. Miss Hollins, too strong with her chip shot could not hole the 12-foot putt, and Mrs. Feitner took the hole when she laid her run up stony dead.

Miss Hollins passed the 400-yard ninth hole, pulling a tee shot widely to the rough, and then following the error with an iron shot which went all the way across the ninth fairway almost at right-angles, finishing again in deep rough. Miss Hollins finally reached the green in five, where Mrs. Feitner awaited in three, to stand six up and with the end in sight.

PRIDE OF STABLE, SARAH KELLY, DESTROYED

Sarah Kelly, pride of the Candler stables, ran her last Saturday afternoon. The 9-year-old trotter was destroyed following a bad fall which resulted in a broken leg. The accident occurred in the second heat of the class A trot of the regular weekly matinee at Lullwater. Sarah Kelly was owned by Asa Candler, Jr.

She was driven by Asa Candler, Jr., and captured the first heat, beating J. F. H. Patterson up, and Pete Greene, W. T. Candler, up, in 2:15.

This horse led the field at the Candler track, winning 20 out of its 28 races.

Summaries follow:

Class A Pace.

Fuzzy Chatham (W. Candler, junior)	1	1
June Coffee (Tom Coggins)	2	3
Lulu Forbes (Walter Candler)	3	2

Time, 2:19 1-4; 2:21.

DIAMOND STARS PLANNING TOUR

St. Louis, Mo., September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—George Sisler, local first sacker who has been chosen the most valuable player in the American league, and Rogers Hornsby, local second sacker, who leads the National league in hits and home runs, will go barnstorming after the close of the season.

Sisler is organizing a team to tour the New England states while Hornsby has signed up with Milton Stock, also of the Cardinals, who is organizing a post-season aggregation. Johnny Lavan of the Cardinals will tour Japan with a team being organized for that purpose.

Chick Shorten, utility outfielder of the Browns, and several Boston Americans will be in Sisler's lineup, including Piercy and Outfielder Mike Menosky.

Hornsby has passed Sisler in hits for the season, having 242 safeties to Sisler's 240. Sisler, however, leads in batting, having a percentage of .417 against Hornsby's .401.

You cannot dodge your responsibility by running away from duty.

Dixie Open Tourney Starts Today in Nashville

LOCAL PREPS BEGIN SOON

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Monday afternoon marked the beginning of the real practice season for football in the ranks of the prep schools. During the past weeks only preliminary workouts have marked the afternoon's work. But now they will have to settle down to some real practice as the season gets under way Friday and Saturday.

Tech High will meet the Locust Grove institute eleven here, probably on Grant field, Saturday morning. Both Boys' High and University hit the rattler for foreign soil. Boys' High plays the LaGrange High eleven in LaGrange and the University Bluebird eleven journeys down to Newnan to meet the Newnan High team Saturday afternoon.

From a peek at the teams during the past week it looks as if the Atlanta prep football fans will be treated to some real football before the season has advanced very far. Practically all the school managers have completed their football schedules and some promising games are looked for Atlanta.

U. S. B. Hands Full.

The University team will have their hands full during the season for no less than seven of their games are to be played on foreign soil. For a club to be victorious in the majority of their games on the road it will mean that they will have to be in the best possible condition all the time. And also will have to play away from their home grounds where they won't have the support of their school in person.

In prep games the student body has a lot to do with a game and a team that plays away from home have heavy odds piled up again them.

Tech High also has one of the hardest schedules in the history of the school for four of the hardest prep games that could possibly be scheduled come in a row. On October 21 Tech High plays the State Normal school eleven in Jacksonville, Ala. The following Saturday they play the Riverside Military academy eleven from Gainesville here, and then come those University Bluebirds the very next Saturday on Grant field. No let up in the playing for those Smithies, for November 11 they journey down to Jacksonville, Fla., and meet the Duval High eleven. G. M. A. will next be played on the 18th of November, and last, but not least, Tech High will meet their ancient foes, Boys' High, on November 30.

Duvxal High played a high school eleven in Ohio for the high school championship last year and won, and the majority of the letter men have been returned to the team this year. That will be a prep football game well worth seeing as the two teams are the best represented prep elevens in the south.

Those football players from the school of Sandy Beaver at Riverside Military academy are not set up prep affairs. Sandy Beaver has always turned out one of the strongest prep elevens in the state. He has several veterans from last year in school again this year.

U. S. B. Chances.

When Tech High meets the University team this year there will probably be a decided difference in the score, from the outlook of the recent University team. With Kaliska as the coach and a host of material on hand the Bluebirds are beginning to look like a real prep football team. There are nine veterans of last year again on hand and they are doing their work faithfully with the new men in order to turn out a real team this year. The team has been strengthened 100 per cent over last year, and the practices are really worth while. The Bluebird-Tech High game will be one of the best prep games for Atlant this season.

The Boys' High eleven, while not as strong as last season, tackles a hard schedule. Boys' High played the Decatur High eleven to a 0 to 0 tie last week, and they have been doing some overtime in practice this week. Many defects were discovered in the green material on the squad, and Coach Winkler has been working on these defects during the past week.

FAVORITES IN CIRCUIT WIN

Columbus, Ohio, September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Favorites took first money in three of the four events on today's Grand Circuit racing program. The only upset coming in The Ohio State Journal $3,000 stake for 2:06 pacers in which Peter Henley, well driven by Harry Stokes, defeated Edna Early, the favorite. In the final heat of this race both Peter Henley and Edna Early broke, Walter Cox winning the heat with Troup Safe.

The other stake events were decided today. The Great Volo, a 4-year-old in the Cox stable, won the chamber of commerce $3,000 stake for 2:08 trotters, defeating Bill Sharon by a narrow margin in each heat.

Tommy Murphy piloted Czar Worthy to a straight heat victory in the Buckeye, $3,000 stake, for 2:12 trotters.

Finvarra, the favorite, won the 2:15 trot, the only class event on the card. It was announced tonight that Nedda, with Henry Fleming up will be driven in an attempt to lower her own record of 1:59 1-4 tomorrow.

WOMEN TO PLAY AT DRUID HILLS

The last of the handicap tournaments before the city championship affair, to be held early in October over the East Lake course, will be staged this morning at Druid Hills under the auspices of the Atlanta Woman's Golf association. Contestants in today's tournament must be members of the association, and the handicaps of the organization will apply.

According to officials of the A. W. G. A., these tournaments have drawn larger entry lists than ever before in the history of the association, and they are confident that a fine gathering will be recorded this morning.

Yellow Jackets May Use Two Sets Of Ends in 1922 Grid Campaign

Possibility That Staton Brothers, Al and John, Will Once More Be Sent Back to Flanks.

The most significant feature about the weekly Tuesday afternoon fight at Tech was the possibility of a new end combination being developed. Or, to be more literal, the possibility of an old end combination being renewed. Thus far this season there have been two sets of ends. Granger and J. Staton formed the heavyweight combination, Nabelle and Mitchell composed the speed demons. Don't be at all surprised if the old Staton-Staton combine is used. The two loving brothers, who are played on separate ends of the line because they get along so well, may be back at it again.

In 1920 they were used in a few games at end, after George Ratterman suffered a severe spell with his stomach. Last season they played ends together until after the Penn State game, when Al Staton was shifted to tackle. Having known each other for nineteen years, they are pretty much used to the habits and customs of each other by now, and should work right well together. At all hazards, the possibility is great that they will be used as a brace of ends at least in some of the games this season.

Coach Alexander must be planning to use his ends much in the same manner as the pony backfield was used last season. He has developed two entirely different sets of ends. One set is rather heavy, slow and a trifle cumbersome, but able to stand gobs of punishment, and give a little in return. The other set is not quite heavy enough to work on tackles all afternoon, but is fast, shifty, and resembles a duet in the backfield. This set makes an excellent pair for going down under punts, for making interference, and for doing all those things where speed is required.

May Use Both.

It may be that he will use the Hippo duo for about a half, in the endeavor to tire the opposing tackles and ends. Then, as he did with the pony backfield last season, send in his light set and start them to running and making interference. This would practically increase his available backfield men by two.

Henry Granger, shifted from tackle to end this season, makes an ideal man for working on the tackles and ends. With three years' experience as a rush linesman, he knows how to work on the men. Then, too, he has enough speed to work in harmony with the rest of the duties of an end.

He has all kinds of power stored up in his legs. It will be like a two-in-one proposition. A man with the driving ability of a good tackle, yet possessing the alertness and stalwartness of an end. A fine combination for a Tech end to possess.

The little soiree yesterday showed up well one man on the second varsity. This was Homer Carter, running halfback on the second. Homer has scrubbed for two years at Tech, and has ever been faithful. It looks as if he will come through this time and do something big. He is fast on his feet, and always a willing helper when another of his side has the ball. The second varsity only managed to get over three first downs in the play yesterday afternoon, and he was largely responsible for all. Being an accurate passer he possesses the double threat that makes him dangerous at all times.

This is the first time in many years that one varsity team has ever scrimmaged another. Heretofore, the danger of injuring a good man has always been too great to risk anything of that nature. This season there are so many good men on the field that it would not hurt the team so much should one of them suffer an injury. Much more benefit is derived from a scrimmage where the two teams are nearly matched. So from now on it will be Greek against Greek and may the best man win. In this way also the men have a chance to show up by comparison, for every man on the first and second varsity has a chance to get into the game on Saturday. Many times the showing in the Tuesday scrimmage will determine the man who is to start the match game.

Oglethorpe's Practice Lighter As Game With Tech Approaches

BY BILL MORROW.

With a host of Petrel supporters on hand expecting a hard scrimmage, Coach Stein turned yesterday's practice into a very unexciting signal drill. Practice started promptly at 3:30 o'clock and consisted almost entirely of signal drill by the three teams. The exact personnel of the team that will start against Tech is as yet unknown, but close followers of Oglethorpe sports have about agreed on the 11 men that will open the 1922 football season for the university. It is the popular belief that Coach Stein will give all the squad an opportunity to show their ability, especially will it be necessary to let at least eight men in the backfield try their luck at hitting the line and running the ends.

Coach Stein has been using two independent backfields during last week or so of practice and both seem to be equal on offense and defense. In the practice game Saturday afternoon the work of three or four men stood out above that of their comrades. Ivey, Maurer and Gordy, playing in the same backfield, displayed some clever football, each getting away for long gains. These three men seem destined to be dealt with before the final picking of the team is made. Maurer and Ivey accounted for the 12 points of their team, Ivey racing 55 yards after interpeting a pass and Maurer also scoring after running around end for the necessary distance. In the run of this player that hails from Piedmont college, he lacked good interference and only got away after stiff-arming three would-be tacklers.

Quarterback Unsettled.

The quarter berth is still in doubt, Varnedoe and Gordy still are having it out for this position. In the practice affair last week both men showed up well, Varnedoe playing the consistent while "Frog's" work at times bordered on the spectacular. Wallace seems the best bet for fullback and, barring injuries during the next few days, will be the most likely to start against the Jackets.

The Oglethorpe line will be much stronger this season. In the past the Petrel line has been the sore spot for the coaches to work upon, this season's combination, however, will be more experienced and heavier. The end positions will be well taken care of by Captain Ed David at one extreme and Halfele, the most likely to be chosen of the combination of Hafele and Campbell. The most promising and experienced tackle contenders are Wyatt and Roberts, both of these men saw service under Oglethorpe colors last season and the experience gained then should be just the amount needed to make them dangerous in their chosen work.

Crowe and Hambrick have about won their spurs at guards, each possesses the necessary weight and experience. The center position has given the coaches considerable trouble. Whitehead and Bartenfelt being the most desirable men for this pivot position have each been given ample opportunity to show their respective abilities. The coaching staff, as stated above, is far from satisfied with the way the ball is passed and during the past three or four days a great deal of stress has been given to this one highly important department of the game. In case a change in the personnel of the line is necessary, Bartenfelt can be shifted to tackle and Whitehead take his place at the center position.

Leard Will Manage.

Winston-Salem, N. C., September 26.—Bill Leard, veteran second baseman, who played with Charleston of the South Atlantic association this season, will manage the local club of the Piedmont league next year. His signed contract was received today by the owners of the Winston-Salem franchise.

INGRAM WILL COACH PREPS

"Sox" Ingram, former star baseball player on the Georgia Tech baseball team for four years, left Atlanta Monday afternoon bound for Shaw, Miss., where he will have charge of athletics in the Shaw High school. Just what branch of the athletics "Sox" will have charge of is not known, as he left town very hurriedly, but there is one thing certain, if he takes on the baseball candidates to teach them the game then his proteges will have a teacher that knows the business from every angle.

Ingram was a varsity man on the Tech baseball team for four years and played left field. He was one of the fastest men on the paths in college baseball and his hitting was responsible for many games being put in the won column.

Ingram joins E. F. Champion, W. E. Fincher, Ham Dowling, Everett Strupper, Charlie Turner, "Pup" Phillips, "Shorty" Doyal and many other former stars of Tech in the coaching world.

Champion at Savannah.

E. F. Champion has charge of athletics in the Savannah High school and has active charge of the football and baseball squads. Although Champion failed to make the coveted "T" at Tech, still he was known to everyone on the football field for his untiring efforts at end on the scrub squad for four long years. Champion was a student of Heisman and it has been said by many that Champion never missed a down in the four years that he was on the squad.

"Bill" Fincher needs no introduction to Atlanta fans, and he will be heard from later when the Tech High eleven marches on the gridiron during the coming days. Fincher has active charge of the Tech High line for the coming season.

Along with Fincher is "Shorty" Doyal, former Tech lineman at Tech High, Doyal is handling the line, while Fincher is helping out at Tech for several weeks. Doyal also helps Tolbert in coaching the Tech High baseball team.

Charlie Turner, former captain of the Tech baseball team of several seasons back, is superintendent of a cotton mill in Alabama and is teaching the younger workmen some of the rudiments of football, baseball, basketball and all other branches of athletics.

"Pup" Phillips has been helping Coach "Bill" Kaliska at University for the past several days.

Everett Strupper, former Tech backfield star in the days of Joe Guyon, has been in the coaching world for the past several years. He is now coaching the Mercer backfield. Strupper started his work at Columbus just after he was discharged from the army.

CLEMSON TO FIGHT HARD

Clemson College, S. C., September 26.—(Special.)—The yell leaders have dragged out their white flannel pants and megaphones and are running the Tiger cadets through their preliminary training for the Clemson-Centre game. The "rah-rah" boys are putting in as much time as the bunch they intend to support.

Clemson has never before seen so much "pep" and enthusiasm around the plant. The cadets have the old "pazazzo" in full blast and not a day passes that doesn't see some sort of meeting to get the rooters in good shape.

Clemson intends to tax her vocal cords at this scrap no matter if it results in the entire school going through a period of hoarseness. When they assemble on Riggs field to cheer the Tigers in their fracas with the Colonels, not a cadet from Clemson who owns a perfectly good set of lungs will be in any condition other than 100 per cent perfect.

Stewart Silent.

"Doc" Stewart, like most other coaches refuses to give the "low down" on what the team is doing, and all the practices are held in board, being as closely guarded as a meeting of a war strategy board. But "Doc" did hand out a little word concerning the Tiger team at a "pep" meeting. He said "we have a mighty fast football team, and one that will give Centre the battle of its life."

The Tiger gridiron boys are going into the game with the realization that they are bumping up against a hard, fast bunch. But although the Colonels are famous, it doesn't signify they are unbeatable. They way the Tigers and their crowd feel now—no team made up of human beings is unbeatable—and they might give you odds on any immortal aggregation that would care to come down their way.

Bob Fortenberry, who has been on the sick list for a good little while, has recovered and is back in the squad. This is another little happiness maker for the Tigers. Bob is just rearing for the chance to get in front of "Red" Robert's way, or anybody else who travels under the colors of the Colonels. In fact the spirit of Clemson is riding in the sky and their intentions are to give the Colonels a fight that will long be remembered by that famous organization.

Golfers All Over Nation Enter for the Big Event; Low Scores Are Predicted

It is Believed by the Experts That Winning Card Must Show as Low as 280 for 18 Holes — Sarazen Not Entered.

Nashville, Tenn., September 26.—Conjecturing as to the winning score in the fourth annual open championship of the Southern Golf association to be held at Belle Meade club beginning Wednesday, is the popular sport at the club grounds, following two days of practice by a majority of the professionals already on hand for the big event.

A gross score of 280 for the 72-hole route is being predicted as the winning card, this representing 70 or one under par for every round in the tournament, making four under par for the complete route. In view of the fact that par at Belle Meade was cut Saturday from 73 to 71 for the more than 6,300-yard affair, the 280 mark set by many of the professionals who played the course Sunday and Monday sounds like a considerable assignment, but the way some of the professionals are shooting in practice indicates that it is very much of a probability.

It is also predicted that 291 will not put a man in the contest for one of the twelve prizes.

The course is in wonderful shape, although a little rain would not hurt before the play starts Wednesday. The fair greens are in better shape than ever before. The putting greens are likewise in trim and the visiting professionals have been most complimentary in their remarks about the course, not only as regards its condition, but as to its being a real test of golf.

Low Scores Made.

Nashville, Tenn., September 26.—Low scores marked the morning round of entrants in the fourth open championship of the Southern Golf association to be played at Belle Meade Country club the last half of the week.

Bobbie Cruikshank, of Essex County Country club, New York, shot a par breaking first round in 69, equaling the previous low score of Harry Hampton, of Detroit, made here Sunday. Wilfred Reid, of the Indian Springs Country club, of Maryland, shattered par with a 70 on his first round, his performance being the more remarkable on account of the fact that he had four on the fifteenth and sixteenth, which are par three. Jim Barnes, former national open champion in a nine hole practice turn wound up with an eagle three on the long dog leg ninth, dropping a 25-foot putt from the edge of the green.

Definite word was received today from Gene Sarazen that he would not be here to defend his southern open title at Belle Meade. No cause was given. Chick Evans, prominent Chicago amateur, will be unable to enter the southern open on account of pressing business. Jock Hutchison, Gleview club, Chicago, former British open champion, together with Laurie Ayton, of Evanston Country club, are on the way here and will arrive sometime this evening.

VANDY DRAWS NO EASY FOE

Nashville, Tenn., September 26.—(Special.)—If you have been laboring under the delusion that Middle Tennessee Normal will array a flock of pigmies against the Commodores when the stopper is pulled out of the Vandy grid campaign on Dudley field Saturday afternoon, you are entitled to revise your opinion. For while the Murfreesboro eleven is not a collection of giants, they are far from being moleskin midgets. From tackle to tackle the Normalites will average around 185 pounds, which is quite an impressive battle from a brawn viewpoint.

Coach Miles had five regulars around which to reconstruct his new crop of gridironers. King, Jarrett, Bennett, S. Smith and W. Smith were the letter men who returned, but an excellent crop of newcomers migrated to Murfreesboro this year.

One of the most promising is Wolfenden, last season at Hume-Fogg High school and unanimous choice as all-state end. Central High of this city sent Jones, a tackle, to Normal; Moffett came from Clarksville Hi, where he won much prep fame. McCallie sent up Miller and Yarbrough. Elrod, Pollock, Davis, Baker, Simpson, Phillips and Duck are the other line candidates.

Normal has sent too many grid performers to Vanderbilt to warrant the mistake of ever underestimating their ability. Jess Neely was a Normalite performing against the Commodores three years ago; Rupe Smith, who carried over the onside kick against Georgia, was another backfield star at Murfreesboro, and the same school sent down Putty Overall, who rendered line aid to the Commodores last year.

The Normal backfield, according to Coach Miles, is light but speedy, and may prove dangerous if it should happen to get away.

America Defeats Britain.

Washington, September 26.—American rifle men have won another world's championship, defeating a picked British team for the Dewar trophy, emblematic of the small bore championship of the world, according to advices to the National Rifle association from Camp Perry, Ohio.

The American team shot the match at Camp Perry, while the British shot at a range in England. Similar targets were used under similar conditions. The rifles were of .22 calibre. The American score was 7,685 out of a possible 8,000. The British made 7,640. The United States has now won the match for six years in succession.

Pirate Pilot Named.

Pittsburg, Pa., September 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Appointment of William C. McKenzie as manager of the Pittsburg Nationals for the next season was announced today by President Barney Dreyfus.

David Taylor to Marry.

Johnson City, Tenn., September 26. David Haynes Taylor, star catcher of the Appalachian league and son of Governor and Mrs. Alfred A. Taylor, will be married tomorrow to Miss Nellie Pope, of Lenoir, it was announced today. The governor will perform the ceremony.

Those who do their level best, soon find themselves mounting the ladder of success.

Mrs. Mathews, Mr. and Mrs. Wrigley and Signor Volpi Give Program for Atlantans on Trip.

A Volpi program worthy of more than usual note was presented between 9 and 9:45 o'clock last night from Station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, in special compliment to a party of Atlantans headed by Colonel F. J. Paxon, now visiting West Baden, Ind. Artists on last night's program, given under the direction of Signor E. Volpi, were Mrs. Rose L. Mathews, soprano; Mrs. W. H. Wrigley, Jr., coloratura soprano; W. H. Wrigley, Jr., saxophonist, and Signor Volpi, who played piano accompaniments for both Mrs. Mathews and Mrs. Wrigley.

Mrs. Mathews was put on the program for a special number which was requested by Atlantans at West Baden, Ind., after they heard her sing Sunday night from Station WGM.

Reports from West Baden by telegraph following the concert were that the program was received magnificently there and that every note of the concert came out clear and strong. Very little static was in the air and this made the concert doubly enjoyable.

To Give Dance Music.

Tonight between 9 and 9:45 o'clock Station WGM will transmit dance music from Roseland, Atlanta's dance hall at the corner of Peachtree and Cain streets. The music wil be given by LaFell's orchestra, which has only been heard once before from Station WGM. The music will be brought into Station WGM by cable and then broadcast with The Constitution's 500-watt transmitter.

From 9:45 to 10 o'clock tonight Operator Shropshire will give his daily demonstration of reception of the international Morse code. These lessons are becoming more popular every day.

The program last night which was given under Signor Volpi's direction, consisted of nine numbers, six of which were vocal numbers by Signor Volpi's two pupils and three of which were saxophone solos by Mr. Wrigley with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Wrigley.

Sings Special Request.

The numbers which Mrs. Mathews sang were "Old Pal, Why Don't You Answer Me," and "At Dawning." The first was the number requested from West Baden, Ind. The second was presented by Mrs. Mathews at the request of an Atlanta listener.

Mrs. Wrigley who made her radio debut last night from Station WGM has an unusually sweet coloratura voice that has been brought out surprisingly by Signor Volpi during the last few months. She sang four selections. They were "The World Is Waiting for the Sunrise," "Baby, Dear," "Rose in the Bud," and "Dear Little Boy of Mine." The last of these numbers was the best of Mrs. Wrigley's selections.

For his saxonhoue solos Mr. Wrigley offered "When Shall We Meet Again," "Sewanee River Moon," and "You, Just You."

TOM BRANNON WILL UNDERGO MINOR OPERATION

Tom Brannon, trumpeter of Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, will be missing from the Aces' lineup this week since he will undergo a minor operation.

Mr. Brannon is always an outstanding part of the Aces for his trumpet carries well by radio and his breaks are always good. He will return next week, however, and the Aces will again have their full personnel.

HOPPER IS SPEAKER AT KIWANIS MEETING

DeWolf Hopper, prince of good fellows and king of comedians, was preeminently the feature of the luncheon given in his honor by the Atlanta Kiwanis club at the chamber of commerce Tuesday. For 20 minutes 150 members of the club were kept in constant laughter by his original jokes.

The luncheon was presided over by J. S. Kennedy, president of the Kiwanis club. Louis Haase, manager of the Atlanta theater, introduced Mr. Hopper and members of his troupe.

Snores After Eating

The person afflicted with gas in the stomach and bowels often has a tired, sleepy feeling after eating, particularly in the afternoon. In some cases the fingers, arms or limbs "go to sleep," due to gas pressure which restricts circulation.

These annoying symptoms can be promptly relieved by taking Baalmann's Gas Tablets. Bloating, belching, rumbling in abdomen, heart palpitation, nervousness, anxiety and other distress caused by gas will soon disappear, and you will be able to eat what you like without ill-effect.

Baalmann's Gas Tablets are harmless, pleasant and effective. Nationally known and used. For sale L. Curtis Drug Co., Jackson Drug Co., Chas. A. Smith and leading druggists everywhere. Price, one dollar. Be sure to get the genuine, in the yellow package. J. Baalmann, Chemist, San Francisco.—adv.

The A B C's of International Morse Code

BY A. W. SHROPSHIRE

THE LETTER "U."

For today we will take up the letter "U." It is composed of two dots and one dash. The letters composed of mixed combinations of dots and dashes are harder to remember than the letters composed wholly of dots or dashes and consequently require more practice and concentration.

Eternal perseverance and practice are the things that it takes to learn the code, but once you have mastered it thoroughly you will never forget it, and I have yet my first person to see that regrets "sticking" to the end. If you are over twenty years of age, you are somewhat handicapped, as a youngster usually learns much quicker than a grown person, but if you will persevere and practice you can overcome this handicap.

Next to learning the sound of the letters, the spacing of letters and words is most important. The space between two letters is equal in length to one dot, and the spacing between words or groups of letters is equal to one dash. Beginners can seldom receive code with the spacing this short, so in the daily demonstrations that we send the spacing is longer than this.

If you miss a letter, don't stop to think of what it is, but skip it and get the next letter. By doing this you will soon find that there are a number of letters that you can easily recognize, while there will be others that you can never seem to get. These latter ones are the ones that you want to practice on during your spare time. When I was learning the code, I mastered all of the letters except four in a reasonable length of time, but could never get these four letters unless they were sent exceedingly slow. I set aside one day to each of these letters. The first day I took the letter "Y" and sent it over and over again. Each time I sent it, I repeated that letter aloud. At the end of the four days I knew all four of those letters thoroughly, and don't believe I have missed them since.

The letter "U" will be sent at 6:40 and 9:10 P. M. and the usual review at 6:45 and 9:45.

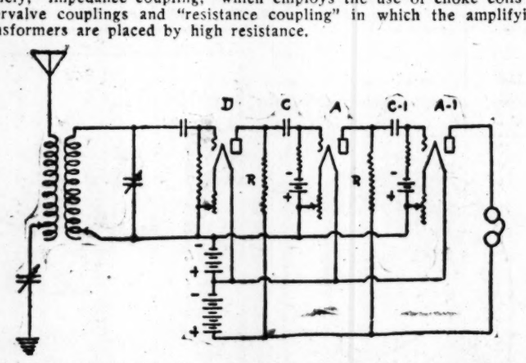
LESSON NO. 158.

Resistance Coupling in Multi-Stage Amplifiers.

There are three methods in general use for coupling the separate stages in amplifiers employing several steps for the purpose of magnifying the incoming radio signals. Of these methods, coupling by voltage amplifying transformers is perhaps the most common, the other two methods being namely, "Impedance coupling," which employs the use of choke coils as intervalve couplings and "resistance coupling" in which the amplifying transformers are placed by high resistance.



In the accompanying diagram, the coupling resistances are shown at (R), these resistances having a high value, for example, 100,000 to 2,000,000 ohms. A coupling resistance, at all events, must have a value in excess of the internal impedance of the tube.

The incoming oscillations are rectified by the detector (D) and the voltage variations are amplified by the two succeeding stages (A) and (A-1). The condensers (C) and (C-1) are inserted in the grid circuits of the two stages of amplification to prevent the voltage of the plate battery from affecting the grids of the respective stages. The audio-frequency component of the plate current of the detector tube passes through the condenser (C) and causes voltage variations on the grid of the first amplifier tube (A). These grid variations in turn cause, in the plate circuit of (A), rapid variations which pass through the condenser (C-1) and produce voltage variations on the grid of (A-1) which in turn cause further amplified variations in the plate circuit of (A-1).

The use of the grid bias or "C" battery in the two stages of amplification permits operation at a desirable point of the characteristic curve so that amplification may be accomplished with distortion.

In contrast to amplifiers employing transformers or impedance coils for interstage coupling, the resistance coupled amplifier requires a plate battery having a voltage from two to four times in excess of that normally used. This is necessitated by the loss in voltage through the high resistance in the plate circuit.

In resistance coupled amplifiers the amplification per tube is not as great as in the case of transformer coupling but for long wave lengths the amount of amplification is praetically independent of the length of the wave. Full amplification for wave lengths below 1,000 meters is seldom realized in resistance coupled amplifiers.

For application in the "Super-Heterodyne" method of reception originated by E. H. Armstrong, several stages of resistance coupled radio-frequency amplification may be used to amplify the beating oscillations, which has a frequency above audibility, before this oscillation is rectified and further magnfied by audio-frequency amplification.

"OLD DARKY'S DREAM OF HEAVEN" SOUGHT

L. B. Ahern, 208 Highland avenue, Gastonia, N. C., would like to receive a copy of the poem entitled "An Old Darky's Dream of Heaven," which he says was published in The Constitution several years ago. The poem begins, he says, with: "I dreamed a prophet dream de oder night; I dreamed dat I was dead and dat my speret took its flight to mansions overhead."

MORE IMPROMPTU NUMBERS BY ACES

Hit of Monday Night's Programs Inspired Warner's Constitution Music Manufacturers.

When Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, scored one of their biggest hits since they have been playing for Station WGM, they are anxious to try their luck again with the same kind of program that drew so much comment from enthusiastic listeners.

As a result of this desire of the Aces to meet the demands of listeners, they tonight will give another impromptu program similar to that of Monday night in which they scored such a remarkable triumph. Request numbers principally will make up the impromptu program for tonight.

Every day a new quality turns up among the Aces. Their latest quality to be discovered is their ability to play almost any popular number that listeners may request. Time after time the Aces have been called on for request numbers that they had never played for Station WGM. One of these instances came up Monday night, when a listener asked for "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." Mr. Warner was told of the request.

"Sure, we'll play it," he replied. "We haven't played it for a long while, but we'll do what we can."

And what the Aces did with it was worthy of more than passing notice, for they scored heavily in this waltz.

Last night the Aces only played five numbers, but the five numbers they played were worth two hours of half-way music. It was the best music Atlanta dance orchestras have to offer. It was especially good because the Aces had the benefit, as they always have, of Mr. Warner's own arrangement of selections.

Two of the biggest hits on last night's program by the Aces were more or less impromptu numbers, which adds promise to the impromptu concert which is planned for tonight. Last night "Georgette," a request selection, was one of their biggest hits. The other selection that went so well with listeners was "Low Down Blues," which the Aces played by a special arrangement.

The arrangement of "Low Down Blues," was thought up just a little while before the concert.

"Let's play it tonight," suggested one of the Aces, and it was a heavy looking saxophone player, Pritchett by name, who made the suggestion.

There was a moment's hesitation.

"Sure," chimed in every other Ace as the decision was reached almost simultaneously by all six of the musicians. And it was played in such a manner that listeners remarked especially on it.

Retail Merchants Resume Monthly Meetings Thursday

The first fall monthly membership of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association is set for Thursday evening, September 28, 6:30 p. m., supper Chamber of Commerce cafe.

Membership service to the members, educational and meetings committees will make recommendations at the meeting.

The most interesting feature will be the round-table discussion of the subject, "Items of Service the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association Can Render to the Members and the Trading Public." The meeting will be concluded by a short address from W. W. Orr, of the George Muse Clothing company, on the subject, "The Place Filled By, and the Value of, the Retail Merchants to the Community."

W. A. Sutton, superintendent of public schools, will tell the merchants briefly what the opportunity school has done for retail employees and what the school expects to do during the coming year. J. M. Watters, head of the Tech School of Commerce, in a short address, will acquaint the retail merchants with the service of the school.

Chamber Directors To Hear Getsinger On Foreign Trade

Members of the board of directors of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, at the regular meeting Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock will hear an address on the purpose of establishing a branch office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in Atlanta, by B. G. Getsinger, division manager at the local office.

John L. McDougal, lately appointed representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce and local circulation manager for the "Nation's Business," will also address the board of directors at the meeting Wednesday. Mr. McDougal will discuss the general work of the National Chamber of Commerce.

Other important matters are scheduled for attention at the meeting Wednesday, it was announced Tuesday.

$20,000 FIRE LOSS SUFFERED AT ADEL

Adel, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—C. W. Carter's planing mill was totally destroyed by fire here last night. The loss is about $20,000, partly covered by insurance. The fire department did good work in keeping the fire off the Standard Oil company tanks, though it seemed at one time that these tanks would be burned with 80,000 gallons of gasoline.

LOCK SPIKE COMPANY TO SUBLET ORDERS

Negotiations for letting contracts totaling several millions of dollars will be finally disposed of at a continued meeting of the stockholders of the Rail Lock Spike company, to be held at the plant, 731 North Ashby street, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, it was announced by H. E. Harris, vice president, in charge of the corporation, following the first session of the call meeting of stockholders Tuesday.

This corporation manufactures safety appliances for railroads, and it was stated that the demand for the product was so great that the plant in Atlanta would not be able to supply it, and that it was the purpose of the corporation to sublet contracts for production to one or more large steel corporations which are bidding for the contracts.

New York, September 26.—The circulation of October notices and near months liquidation had an unsettling effect on the cotton market today and after selling at 21.26, December contracts broke to 21.05. They closed at that price with the general market closing steady 13 to 20 points net lower.

The market opened steady 10 points lower to 1 point higher, near months being relatively easy owing to reports that notices had been issued reporting about 17,000 bales for delivery on October contracts. Early offerings were well absorbed and there was buying of near months by spot houses, accompanied by reports that trade interests were preparing to take up cotton. There also was scattered buying on a private report placing the condition of the crop at 50.6 and the indicated yield at 9,950,000 bales. October sold up to 20.95 and January to 21.05 during the morning, making net advances of 7 to 15 points, but while part of the notices seemed to be promptly stopped others continued to circulate and led to further near month liquidation. This eased the market off about noon when there was a good deal of switching from October to later deliveries, with October selling down to 20.67 and January to 29.84 or 9 to 21 points net lower. October rallied slightly in the trading but December and later months closed at about the lowest prices of the day. The weakness of October was attributed partly to the high grade of the early new crop cotton resulting from favorable weather conditions and expectations that premiums on the better grades in the local stock will be reduced. Southern spot firms were heavy buyers of October against sales of January and March during the day. Exports today 9,210 bales, making 497,529 so far this season. Port receipts 64,532. United States stocks 651,486.

New York, September 26.—Spot cotton quiet; middling 21.00.

WAR NEWS DECLINES NEW ORLEANS COTTON

New Orleans, La., September 26.—Small declines prevailed in cotton today during the greater part of the session, being induced by an unfavorable opinion of war news and by reports from the New York market that rather larger first October notices than expected had been allowed to circulate nearly all day. Locally, October notices were quickly stopped. Early declines under war news amounted to 10 to 14 points after which hthere was a rally to the highest levels of the day, advances over yesterday's close of 9 to 14 points. For this rally a private bureau report on condition of 46 per cent of normal indicating a crop of but 9,400,000 bales, was partly responsible.

After the middle of the morning the market had little strength but sags were only narrow and during a good part of the time price changes were within narrow limits, sellers being prevented from taking advantage of the situation in the October position in New York by small crop talk. Again, there were notices for 4,500 bales issued here and quickly stopped, mostly by one large spot house which, at times during the session actively bid for October.

In the late trading a local private bureau report on condition of 50.5, indicating a crop of 9,970,000 bales, was something of a steadying influence. The market finally closed at net declines on the day of 6 to 14 points, October closing at 20.28 after having traded as high as 20.48 and as low as 20.21.

NEW ORLEANS SPOTS.

New Orleans, September 26.—Spot cotton steady and unchanged. Sales on the spot 139. To arrive 1,033. Low middling 19.25; middling 20.50; good middling 21.25. Receipts 8,621. Stock 98,242.

Liverpool Cotton.

Liverpool, September 26.—Cotton, spot quiet; prices easy; good middling 13.08; fully middling 12.93; middling 12.78; low middling 12.38; good ordinary 11.53; ordinary 11.05; sales 5,000 bales, including 3,000 American; receipts 4,000 bales, including 500 American. Futures closed steady; September 12.40, October 12.34, December 12.14, January 12.09, March 12.00, May 11.89, July 11.74.

Cotton Seed Oil.

New York, September 26.—Cottonseed oil advanced 5 to 12 points early with lard and the tightness in crude, but the market reacted shortly toward the last under selling by commission houses and scattered liquidation and closed easy at net declines of 14 to 19 points. Sales 12,400 barrels. Prime crude $7.25 asked; prime summer yellow spot $9.00; October $8.54; December $8.07; March $8.20, all bid.

Stock Letter.

Foreign developments were used as a pretext to put down stocks, but around last week's low prices sufficient support was furnished to turn the tide.

Standard oils were featured again with Standard Oil of California making new high on the move.

There were evidences of accumulation in this issue between 110 and 115, and the present movement is understood to be in anticipation of a capital readjustment.

Foreign uncertainties and the fact that business improvement is below expectation may tend to bring about a trading market for the time being. In the past week or so stocks have encountered well defined points of resistance both on the up and down side. Until market shows signs of breaking out of its narrow range one way or other a trading position would seem the logical one to assume.

Summary.

Obregon reported to have signed decree declaring Confiscatory Article 27 of Mexican constitution non-retroactive — Washington without verification. N. Y. C. expected shortly to place order for 200,000 tons steel rails for 1923 requirements.

Unofficially reported in Paris that Angora government will refuse to accept allies' terms at peace conference. London feels, however, that Kemal Pasha will eventually accept. Olds Motor works cut prices on all models averaging $105 a car. Representative of Angora government declared Turkey will go into no peace conference without Russia, Ukraine and Bulgaria, and will never accept demilitarization and neutralization of the straits. Pekin authorizes $10,000,000 bond issue by government in effort to adjust nation's finances. Admiral Bristol reports property loss of Amus in Smyrna of approximately $3,000,000. Senator Thomas Watson, of Georgia, died suddenly today following serious illness of asthma.

Town Topics.

California Petroleum—As urged we would buy stock; trend is clearly up here to discount at 6 or 7 per cent dividend; company in fine shape in view of its oil contract with S. O. of California.

United Retail Stores—The short interest still fails to cover; can be pushed up very sharply whenever the pool gives the word.

Gulf States Steel—The early bulge was too big to hold, but we are in new high territory and should buy the imports for turn or pull. Looks like far over par—possible 110 to 120.

Electric Storage Battery—As urged week or two ago this stock was being accumulated and would do much better to discount the remarkable business and expanding profits.

Will be increase in dividend or melon of all kinds in due course.

Houston Oil—As stated we may buy under 80 for turns and are absolutely unchanged and confident for long pull predictions that this stock will sell at 125 to 150. Crossing 85 actively would likely go up fast for 10 to 20 points.

O. P. X.—Big business and good divi. ahead. This stock is tipped for 40 mark by Christmas and certainly seems worth trailing on the move.

R. D.—The tape indicates splendid absorption on the weak places last week; would have some of this stock and buy all the good dips for turns while under the 60 level.

S. O. N. J.—As urged we see new records; no change in position here; would hold on to every share; should be 25 points more on this move.

R. P. X.—Here, as stated, we see further profits in buying side and would continue bullish policy. One of these days we expect to see this stock in an individual and rather sensational rise.

New York, September 26.—The market acted extremely well today in face of the continued liquidation of the October position; in fact the trade were good buyers during the greater part of the session, the selling coming from the spot houses in the south and the local trade which felt that the market is bound to decline under the weight of the movement. That remains to be seen. Because if the trade buying which has been evident for the last week or ten days continues it should be enough to absorb the offering from the south. We believe any decline that does take place will have to be of a temporary character and that when the large volume of hedges now being sold are covered we may see very much higher prices.

Dry Goods.

New York, September 26.—Cotton goods were steady today, with trade rather quieter. Yarns held firm with the demand showing some expansion. Carpets and rugs were strong and new season prices were made on higher levels. Wool goods were in steady demand for filling in purposes. Burlaps again were active. Silks were reported as active and brocade mills sold to the end of the year.

Provisions.

New York, September 26.—Flour barely steady; spring patents $8.50@7.00; soft winter straights $5.10@5.40; lard firm; middle west $12.00@12.10; other articles unchanged.

Chicago, September 26.—Cash: Pork nominal; lard $11.40; ribs $10.50@11.50.

Minneapolis, Minn., September 26.—Flour unchanged to 20c lower. In carload lots, family patents quoted at $6.60@6.85 a barrel in 98-lb. cotton sacks.

Sugar.

New York, September 26.—Raw sugar firmer, and while prices were unchanged at 3 cents for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 4.71 for centrifugal, in the absence of actual business it was rumored that operators paid 1-16 cents above this level.

Raw sugar futures were firmer on covering and Wall street buying. Final prices were 9 to 11 points net higher. Closing, October 3.14, December 3.25, March 3.11, May 3.23.

Refined unchanged; fine granulated being listed at 6.25 by all refiners. Some selling was still going on below this quotation in second-hand quarters.

LIBERTY WEAKNESS FEATURES BONDS

New York, September 26.—Weakness in both liberty bonds and high grade and speculative issues prevailed in the bond market today. Liberty seconds, four, second 4 1-2s and third 4 1-4s sold below par today for the first time in a long while. All the government issues were lower. The general decline was attributed both to uncertainty over new government financing and the European political situation.

Foreign bonds declined 1 to 1 1-2 points.

High grade utilities held up better in the domestic list than rails or industrials. Declines of 1 to 1 1-2 points were noted in Chile copper 7s, Norfolk and Western convertible 6s, St. Louis and San Francisco income 6s, Seaboard Air Line refunding 5s, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico 5s, and Cuba Cane convertible 7s. Texas and Pacific lists declined two points.

New offerings totalling more than $20,000,000 were put out today by local syndicates. The largest of these, an issue of $7,000,000 first and refunding mortgages 5 per cent bonds of the Pennsylvania Power and Light company, was oversubscribed shortly after the books were opened. These bonds were offered at 92 3-4 and interest to yield about 5 1-2 per cent. Total sales par value were $12,463,000.

Other large offerings included $2,500,000 first and refunding mortgage 6 1-2 per cent gold bonds of the Sheffield farms company, offered at par; $5,000,000 7 per cent 15-year sinking fun convertible notes of the Booth Fisheries company, offered at 97 1-2 to yield more than 25 per cent; $1,485,000 7 per cent sinking fund gold bonds of the Manila Railroad company offered at 112 1-4 to yield about 5.5 per cent. Announcement was also made of the sale by the City of Ponce P. R., of $1,375,000 tax exempt serial 5 per cent bonds to an American syndicate headed by William R. Compton & Co., at $103.48. The bonds are guaranteed by the government of the territory of Porto Rico and will have a ten year average maturity.

London Money.

London, September 26.—Bar silver 35¾d per ounce; money 1¾ per cent. Discount rates, short and 3 months bills 2⅝ per cent.

Coffee.

New York, September 26.—Coffee futures opened 3 points lower under some scattering December liquidation, with that delivery selling off to 9.21, or 5 points net lower. The market was steadied by higher late cables from Santos, with the close net 2 points lower to 2 points higher. Sales 10,000 bags. October 9.09, December 9.24, January, March and May 9.20, July 9.22, September 9.18.

Spot coffee steady; Rio 7s 10 to 10¼; Santos 4s 14½ to 15¼. Cost and freight offers were irregular, inluding Santos 3s and 5s, part bourbon at 13.75 to 14.00 and Rio 7s at 9.70 American credits.

The official cables reported a decline of 50 to 100 reis in the Rio market, with an advance of 70 reis in the dollar buying rate and a decline of 1-16d in Rio exchange on London. The early cable from Santos was 100 to 200 reis lower, but special cables were received later, one showing an advance of 50 to 225 reis and another 150 to 175 reis. Brazilian port receipts 40,000; Jundiahy receipts

PATERNITY CASE IN JUDGE'S HANDS

South Bend, Ind., September 26.—The question of the paternity of "Bill," the ten-months-old son of Mrs. Augusta Tiernan, rests tonight in the hands of Judge Chester L. Ducomb, judge of the South Bend city court. Mrs. Tiernan is the wife of John P. Tiernan, Notre Dame law professor.

At 9 a. m. Saturday Judge Ducomb will pass final judgment as to whether the infant is the son of Harry Poulin, clothing salesman, as Mrs. Tiernan claims.

The hearing which began a week ago Monday closed late this afternoon, with the completion of the attorneys' closing arguments summing up the evidence previously presented. Prior to the arguments, several additional witnesses testified, two for the defense and three for the state, one of the three prosecuting witnesses being Mrs. Tierman herself. Prosecutor Floyd O. Jellison having decided to call her back in an attempt to refute the absolute denial of her charges made by the defendant and other defense witnesses.

One of the defense witnesses, Mrs. Sara Worden, testified concerning Poulin's attendance at church on the nights when he is charged with having visited Mrs. Tiernan. The other witness, Vee Woodruff, a lumberman, testified concerning one of the points presented as an alibi for Poulin.

The new witnesses for the state were Patrick Doran, a Notre Dame student, who refuted one portion of Poulin's testimony, and Mrs. Louise Powers, who said she had seen Mrs. Poulin but not her husband at church on the nights under question during Lent in 1921.

THREE STRIKE ARRESTS MADE IN WAYCROSS

Waycross, Ga., September 26.—Three arrests have been made by United States Deputy Marshals for alleged violations of the federal injunction against striking shopmen Those arrested are Paul Austria, Georgia Haddock and Lee Pope, who are being held under $2,000 bond each.

In city court today H. K. Pursley was convicted of a charge of assault and battery upon Will Burk, a negro, who was beaten with billiard cues, according to the evidence, after he returned to work in the Atlantic Coast Line shops.

India has the most remarkable file of identifications in the world, the whole population having been subjected to make this record of 480,000,000 finger prints.

Glowing Tribute To Dead Senator By His Friends

High praise of the ability and public service of Senator Thomas E. Watson was uttered Tuesday by close friends of the senator who are in Atlanta. Some of these friends have worked with him in his campaigns for many years

Tribute to the career of Senator Watson was paid by Benjamin M. Blackburn, of Atlanta, for many years a staunch supporter and friend of the senator. In discussing Senator Watson's career Mr. Blackburn said:

"Turning back the leaves of history on this day of gray, in this hour of gloom and in this retrospect of the memorable, I read of no name in the life of Georgia more inextricably interwoven with the heroic; not one more terrific in condemnation of oppression; none more defiant in challenge to the oppressor; no tongue or pen more eloquent and commanding in patriotic appeal and defense; no leader more steadfast in daring the people's rights maintain, 'unawed by power and unbribed by gain;' no inspiring soul that responded more sympathetically to all the tender emotions than the name, the heart and the soul of the great Sage of Hickory Hill—lawyer, orator, author, historian, statesman, inflamed lover of the people—Thomas E. Watson.

Tribune of People.

"By choice, by education, by inheritance, by environment Tom Watson was the uncontrolled and uncontrollable tribune of the people. Born to dare for the people; to suffer for the people; to lead the people; to conquer for the people; to die in the arms of popular love and righteousness.

"In my rides with him, particularly over the road leading to Augusta at the time of the noted trials when he was being prosecuted by the Wilson administration, at the break of day on the going, and in the day's close on returning, he would tell me of the days he passed, in sunshine and in storm, as he trudged with tin bucket and scant lunch, walking five miles to and fro, determined upon a career destined to be one of trial and struggle, of failure and success, of disappointment and achievement—all for the people and the people's good.

"No obstacles loomed to interrupt his determined resolve; no storm ever turned back the onward feet of this barefooted brave; no denial or disaster ever threatened to quench the burning flame of impassioned ambition; no cloud of dismay ever hovered over a life born to do or die."

Mirror of Greatness.

Secretary of State S. G. McLendon in speaking of Senator Watson said:

"Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, James Otis and Andrew Jackson are all reflected in Thomas E. Watson. He loved liberty with the passion of Henry; he always held to his political doctrine, untarnished, as did Jefferson; he possessed all the courage of Jackson, and he had all the great heart and flaming tongue of Otis.

"But there is one universally known history-maker to whom Thomas E. Watson is more appropriately likened than to any of those mentioned above. There is but one man in all history to whom he is to be compared without reserve, and that man is Voltaire, whose audacity, whose hatred of hypocrisy, whose bitter opposition to sham, in church and state, are so thrillingly featured in the Watson history of France.

"If like Voltaire, the common people's tribune, it is still more like Voltaire, the bitter satirist, that the Georgia senator is best characterized. It is in this role that he has become 'the best loved and worst hated man in the south.' His lance of ridicule has been thrust into the most conventional beliefs and traditions of the church. Catholic belief he has waged bitter war against, and Protestant practices he has fought. Politicians, officeholders, teachers—men in every walk of life—have felt the lash of the Watson satire."

Personal Following.

"Tom Watson had the largest personal following of any man who ever lived in Georgia and always could depend on his supporters in any race he made. His friends loved him and believed in him. He was a man of wonderful oratorical ability; a great brain, and true friendship. The last message I had from him was a picture sent me a few weeks ago from Washington. On the back he had written, 'From me, John. That little message tells the whole story of Tom Watson's characteristics."

Colonel George W. Seals, life-long Watson leader, showed a telegram he recently received from the senator. In this telegram Senator Watson spoke of his love for his followers and of the deep appreciation he cherished for the service they rendered and for the unselfish way in which they supported him in his fights.

Judge James K. Hines, member of the supreme court, spoke in praise of Senator Watson's ability as a lawyer.

"Few advocates could equal his power before courts and juries," he said. "In his prime of life he was the greatest stump speaker I ever heard."

METHODISTS MAKING BIG CLEAN-UP DRIVE

One payment of $5,000 is reported as the first fruits of the Methodist "clean-up" drive now being conducted by the north Georgia conference, it was announced Tuesday by Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, secretary of education, north Georgia conference. The movement now on is for the purpose of collecting installments due on pledges given in June, 1921, at which time the north Georgia conference pledged $811,000 for a period of five years, and a like sum was subscribed by the south Georgia conference.

Approximately $150,000 is expected to be collected for immediate use by the Methodist schools of the state during the campaign of the two conferences now on. The $5,000 payment made in the beginning of the drive was from a man who had subscribed $10,000 for the five years, it was stated Tuesday.

The Griffin district, one of the 12 districts of north Georgia conference, is manifesting a great interest in this work. The boll weevils and the rains have made crops and crop conditions as bad within the Griffin district as they are anywhere in Georgia, and yet despite this fact this district is paying pledges promptly and fully.

To add zest to the campaign, an outside party, not accounted in the $12,000,000 subscriptions, has offered $1,250,000 to the Methodists in case they raise the funds already pledged.

Soue to Sail.

Athens, Ga., September 26.—Murray Soule, professor of chemistry at the University of Georgia, left this afternoon for New York city, from which place he will sail to England, where he will take a course at Oxford university.

CONTRACT IS LET FOR CITY MARKET

by 143, embracing a basement providing cold storage space for every dealer, a main floor which will be given over entirely to dealers in foodstuffs, and a mezzanine floor, in which will be located hair-dressers, flower shops, dealers in novelties and others appealing to the wants of the feminine shopper.

Big Auditorium.

In addition to these features a refrigerated auditorium, capable of seating 1,200 people, and arranged to accommodate not only entertainments and meetings of a formal nature, but indoor games, banquets, balls and so forth has been provided, and it is expected will prove one of the most popular features of the market.

The building will have two main entrances, in addition to doors which will open on every side upon the private driveway and parking space which will encircle the building. The Peachtree entrance will lead directly to the mezzanine floor, where will be located spacious and complete rest rooms, reading rooms, a free nursery, and all of the most modern conveniences, and the Cain street entrance will open on the main floor.

The building will be one of the most ornamental in the city. In designing it the architects have followed the Spanish rennaissance type of architecture. The entire structure will be of reinforced concrete construction.

Officials to Participate.

In view of the civic significance of the initiation of Atlanta's first modern market building, officials from all of Atlanta's civic organizations have been invited to participate in the ceremonies marking the beginning of building operations. Among those who will participate are the following:

Mrs. R. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Woman's club; W. O. Foote, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Mayor James L. Key, Thomas C. Law, president of the Inter Civic Council of Atlanta; William M. Brownlee, president of the Atlanta Rotary club; Sherrard Kennedy, president of Kiwanis, of Atlanta; Julian Boehm, president of the Atlanta Civitan club; Mrs. Mable Kendrick, president of the business women's organization of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Eugene Oberdorfer, president of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce; Charles N. Walker, president of the Atlanta Masonic club; George M. Hope, chairman of the Fulton county board of commissioners, and R. Winston Harvey, president of the Atlanta Advertising club.

J. R. Begnas, vice president and general manager of the Capital City Building and Market company, is president of the Atlanta Lions' club, and will represent that body at the ceremonies.

BRITISH GENERAL ORDERS TURKS OUT

have also been redoubled, but some relief is felt over the arrival at Chanak of British reinforcements and the announcement that additional naval units were on the way to Constantinople from Malta. These consist of a destroyer flotilla and two light cruisers, which are expected to reach here with all despatch.

The statement by Major General Maurice, the British military expert, who is usually a severe critic, that the British forces could hold Chanak, the key position of the Dardanelles, against any nationalist attempt, is highly encouraging and accepted here as voicing the opinion of the officers in general.

"We are prepared," he said. "We can prevent the Turks from crossing the straits and invading Thrace and can successfully keep them out of Constantinople."

The Familiar Quotations Pastime

Our Title Catalogue Will Make You a Winner

The whole secret of success lies in our Familiar Quotations Catalogue. It is just what YOU will need to win the awards of this interesting Pastime. Nearly 2,000 titles are alphabetically listed in this Official Booklet—plenty of suggestions for the "best" answer to each picture. The Judges will select the winning quotations from this Catalogue.

The Catalogue also contains valuable coupons, which you may redeem for the first 30 Pastime Pictures. Price, 40c per copy.

Illustration No. 18

The Atlanta Constitution's Familiar Quotations Pastime

$2,000 in Awards Sept. 27, 1922

WHAT QUOTATION DOES THIS PICTURE REPRESENT?

. . . . . .

Your Name . . . . . .

Street and Number . . . . . .

P. O. . . . . . State . . . . . .

Sixty illustrations will be published in this newspaper, one every day. You may give three choices of titles, each of which must be written on a separate answer form like the above. Save your titles and send them in all together. Watch The Constitution for details.

NOTE—The daily and Sunday Constitution delivered by carrier in Atlanta and outside of Atlanta, where such service is rendered, at 20 cents a week, or 90 cents a month. Or sent by mail outside of Atlanta, one month 90 cents; three months $2.50; six months $5.00; one year $9.50. New subscriptions will begin on day received by Constitution, and will not be dated back to include back pictures.
BACK PICTURES will cost five cents each for daily and ten cents each for Sunday issues. All orders for pictures must be addressed to Manager, Familiar Quotations Pastime, Atlanta Constitution, accompanied by remittance stating number of picture or pictures desired.

This Is Not a Subscription Contest

The Familiar Quotations Pastime was not designed as a subscription contest. You don't have to "qualify" in order to win. Everything is wide open for YOU to come into the Game and win on the same footing as everyone else. All you need to do is start saving the daily Pictures, and give them titles. What could be more simple?

Judging of the "best" sets of titles will be done by three well known Atlanta citizens, who will be impartial and capable in judgment. What could be fairer?

The Prizes:

$2,000 In Cash

First Cash Prize	$1,000
Second Cash Prize	500
Third Cash Prize	250
Fourth Cash Prize	100
Fifth Cash Prize	75
Sixth Cash Prize	50
Seventh Cash Prize	10
Eighth Cash Prize	10
Ninth Cash Prize	10
Tenth Cash Prize	10
Eleventh Cash Prize	10
Twelfth Cash Prize	10
Thirteenth Cash Prize	10
Fourteenth Cash Prize	10
Fifteenth Cash Prize	10

Some Important Points to Remember

Save each one of our pictures, published daily. Give it a title. If you want to you may secure as many as three copies of each picture, and give three choices of titles.

Keep all your pictures until the end of the Pastime. We can't guarantee the return of any pictures submitted before the end of the game.

Remember, anyone in Georgia or adjoining states can compete—man, woman or child. No entrance fees are required.

STUDY THESE RULES FOR SUCCESS

1. The Familiar Quotations Pastime is open to any man, woman, boy or girl who is a resident of Georgia or adjoining states, except employees or relatives of employees of The Constitution. No entrance fees are required.

2. The Familiar Quotations Pastime consists of sixty pictures, one appearing in The Constitution each day. Each contestant may submit three title answers for each picture, each on a separate answer form. Selection of titles will be found in the Official Familiar Quotation Pastime Catalogue.

3. The Catalogue of Quotations may be consulted at the office of The Constitution, or at any public library in the prescribed territory of this Pastime. Participants may also purchase copies of this Catalogue at the office of The Constitution at 40 cents per copy.

4. Each person may participate only as one contestant, and only in his or her own name. However, each participant may submit as many as six complete sets of title answers. Each set of answers will be judged on its own merits. A duplicate list of the selections submitted should be retained by the contestant for self-checking purposes. Full instructions regarding this duplicate list will appear in The Constitution at the close of the Pastime.

5. Three methods may be followed in preparing answers: (1) Each picture published during the 60 days of the Pastime will be accompanied by an official Answer Form, with blank ruled lines for the inscription of your choice of title. (2) Participants may submit handdrawn (not traced) facsimiles of each picture and answer form on sheets of white paper 5x8 inches. (3) Quotations may be submitted in the convenient Familiar Quotations Answer Book.

6. Selections of quotations must not be sent in until the close of the Pastime. Then each participant is to mail or deliver his own set of selections according to instructions appearing in The Constitution. Quotations may be written with pen or pencil, or typewritten. After the publication of the sixtieth picture, sufficient time will be given contestants to prepare their sets of selections before submitting them.

7. The winners of the Familiar Quotations Pastime will be selected by three judges having no connection with The Constitution. These judges will be persons of the highest integrity and good judgment. It is understood that participants entering the Familiar Quotations Pastime accept their decisions as final and conclusive.

8. The fifteen awards in the Pastime will be made to the fifteen highest ranking answers on the basis of having achieved the most appropriate or "best" selection of quotations. If there is an equality between two or more answers a decision will be made by the judges between the tying answers according to superiority in the following requirements: (a) The least number of incorrect selections (the titles which are not "best"); (b) The relative position of the contestant's "best" answer—whether first, second or third choice. In the event of an ultimate tie, each tying contestant will receive an equal prize.

9. Use exactly the same form and spelling of quotations in your selections as you find listed in the Familiar Quotations Pastime Catalogue.

10. Any contestant may have his friends assist him in selecting titles for the pictures. However, only one prize will be awarded to any one household; nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group outside the family, who have worked together. The judges reserve the right to discard any set of quotations not complying with the rules and where unfairness is obvious.

NOTICE TO GENERAL AND MECHANICAL CONTRACTORS.

Bids will be received for general contract work, plumbing, heating and electric work, on or before 3 p. m. Friday, October 6th, by the Board of Education, City of Atlanta, for the following new school buildings:

Fraser Street School
Faith Street School
Storrs and Houston Street School
Formwalt Street School.

Character of contract and subdivision of estimates, both general and mechanical, to be as called for on bid blank.

Bids to be addressed to Board of Education, care J. W. Landers, City Purchasing Agent, and endorsed on cover for character of work—"Bids for school building (insert name of school and trade bid on, as listed above)."

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check in the sum of 2 per cent of base bid, both general and mechanical, under the conditions of the specifications.

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids and waive technicalities.

Plans and specifications made by the following architects:

Fraser St. School—Haralson Bleckley.
Faith St. School—Wm. J. J. Chase.
Storrs and Houston—Arthur Neal Robinson.
Formwalt St. School—DeFord Smith.

(Signed) J. N. LANDERS,
City Purchasing Agent.

ALL cans and dairy equipment for an up-to-date dairy business, including two silos.

A chance for the right party to get in the dairy business, and own the best herd in the South. Ten years of labor and money in perfecting this herd.

Will contract to use all the milk this herd will produce, which would make it a paying proposition from the start. Can show where it is now and has been on a paying basis for several years. Other business requires all my time. Will gladly show to anyone who might be interested. Will consider terms or trade.

Will say that this herd holds the highest milk and butter record in Georgia over all breeds, also holds the Grand Champion and Champion prizes over Georgia and South Carolina for the best conformation shown at the Southeastern Fair last fall.

I will offer this herd at private sale for the next thirty days, and should I not find a purchaser, I will then have an auction and sell the entire plant for the highest dollar.

This is a chance for you to secure a paying business, and no risk about disposing of output, as I will take it on contract.

Slugs Himself With Iron Bar Aimed at Cops

Suffering from the effects of a blow which he tried to direct at Police Officer Bailey, Frank Marshall, negro, was carried to Grady hospital Tuesday night following his arrest by Motorcycle Officers Higgins, McKinley, Bailey and Weaver. The officers state that they had noticed Marshall, who was driving a high powered car, and had suspected that he was running liquor. They were driving a police car, and had parked near the corner of Humphreys street, when the negro drove rapidly up, striking the officers' machine a glancing blow.

None of the officers were injured by the negro's car, and they immediately attempted to arrest him. As Officer Bailey approached, Marshall, they stated, grasped a heavy piece of iron, and in drawing back to hit the officer, lost control of himself, letting the iron land on his own head, causing a painful scalp wound. Officer Bailey closed in, using his pistol as a club, and struck several blows before the negro surrendered, in which he declared he had to hit so hard that the trigger guard of his gun was badly bent.

Four negro women were in the car with Marshall at the time of his arrest, and officers state that the machine carried some liquor, but that the women threw it out on the pavement before they could take them in charge. All the women were taken to headquarters and locked up, officers stating they would probably be charged with breaking glass in the street.

Just what charge will be preferred against Marshall was not given out by the officers, but the conditions surrounding his arrest would indicate that he is liable to answer to a charge of colliding with the city machine, resisting an officer, drunkenness and possibly driving a car while intoxicated. Officers state that the negro was so drunk he couldn't handle the iron cudgel and that resulted in his striking himself.

FAILS IN EFFORT TO HAVE WATSON LIE IN CAPITOL

An effort by Congressman William D. Upshaw Tuesday afternoon to have the body of the late Senator Watson lie in state in the capitol here in order that his friends might review it for the last time, failed.

Congressman Upshaw in a wire to Vice President Calvin Cooledge, urged that the cortege accompanying the body of Senator Watson stop in Atlanta on its way to Thomson. A reply to the congressman's wire later informed him that the entourage would not pass through Atlanta but would arrive in Georgia over the Atlantic Coast line railway to Augusta and thence to Thomson.

Congressman Upshaw's wire to Vice President Cooledge was as follows:

"Thousands who mourn the death of Senator Thomas E. Watson hope the funeral party will stop in Atlanta to allow his body to lie in state in the capitol. Will appreciate wire concurring plans.

"WILLIAM D. UPSHAW."

IS INSTANTLY KILLED AT GRADE CROSSING

Defuniak Springs, Fla., September 26.—Lige Cumban was instantly killed and T. H. Padgett was seriously injured when a freight train crashed into an automobile truck in which they were riding at a street grade crossing at this place early today.

First cotton spining mills in the United States were established at Pawtucket, Rhode Island, toward the end of the eighteenth century.

NEW KLAN ORDER GRANTED CHARTER

W. S. Coburn, Formerly Prominent in Parent Order, Forms New Organization—To Be Maskless.

The National Ku Klux Klan, Inc., an organization which, according to W. S. Coburn, of Atlanta, one of its incorporators, will incorporate many of the features of the Knights of the Ku Klux, was yesterday granting ed a charter in Delaware, to operate "in Dedaware, Georgai, and throughout the United States." Several western states have asked for the formation of the new organization, and have agreed to join it, according to Mr. Coburn.

Mr. Coburn stated that the new organization "would include all the good features of the old klan and eliminate all objectionable features, including the use of masks."

Not Branch of Old Klan.

"So many organizations, some of which are purely imitators, and some of which are attempting to take up the work where the ku klux klan leaves off have been formed in the last year that it is impossible to say what the new organization really is," declared F. L. Savage, Chief of Staff to E. Y. Clarke, Imperial Wizard pro. tem. of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, the original order." It is certainly not a branch of the ku klux klan," he added.

Willian S. Colburn, with M. P. Owen, J. P. Wilson and A. E. Wilson, all of Atlanta, who were named as the incorporators of the new order, resigned from the Ku Klux Klan within the past week, he said last night. His resignation, forwarded to the local headquarters covered eight pages of typewritten paper, according to Mr. Coburn. Although he stated his unwillingness to disclose the points covered in it, objections to the parent order were hinted at.

A feature of the new organization is the fact that naturalized citizens, after a residence in the United States of five years may become members.

Following is an Associated Press dispatch from Dover, Del., regarding the granting of the charter of the new order:

Given Delaware Charter.

Dover, Del., September 26.—The National Ku Klux Klan, Inc., an organization proposing, according to its charter, to "engage in a work of patriotic secret, social and benevolent character in Delaware, Georgia and elsewhere in the United States" was incorporated here yesterday, it became known tonight. William S. Coburn, an attorney of Atlanta, Ga., made the application for the charter thmrough the United States Corporation Company of New York. Other incorporators were M. B. Owen, J. P. Owen and A. E. Wilson, all of Atlanta.

The organization will have no capital stock. Its membership is to consist of the incorporators, "and all such other persons as shall contribute or co-operation in the work of the corporation upon the terms and conditions provided by the constitution."

One of the objects of the new organization, according to the charter, is "to receive gifts, donations and bequests of property and to purchase and to hold properties of all kinds."

STOLE GROCERIES AND MAN'S MULE TO HAUL THEM

A loss of one mule and wagon, about 250 pounds of sugar, several sacks of flour, approximately 100 pounds of lard, a quantity of tobacco and other groceries was reported to the police Tuesday night by T. E. Grizzard, who runs a grocery store at 18 Pause street. Call Officers McDaniel and Crankshaw went to the scene of the robbery, finding the back door of the store broken open, but were unable to trace the wagon because of hard pavement.

Evidence seems to point to the fact that the thief or thieves stole the groceries enumerated above and borrowed the owner's mule and wagon to carry them away in.

Ellis Denies Report That He Seeks Seat Held by Tom Watson

Roland Ellis, well-known Macon attorney, in a statement to The Constitution Tuesday, denied that he has made application to Governor Hardwick for appointment as United States senator to succeed the late Thomas E. Watson. Mr. Ellis also states that he has not authorized anyone to make application for him. He says he is busy practicing law, and is not seeking any political preferment. This statement follows:

My attention has been called to a press report intimating that my name was being considered by the governor of the state for the appointment to the ad interim position of the United States senatorship made vacant by the death of Mr. Watson. Neither I nor any friend of mine, with my consent, has suggested such a thing to the governor. I have never requested an appointment of any kind or character of him nor have I ever instigated a request from any one to propose my name to him for a political position. I am engaged in the practice of law, and am not in the slightest in the business of the quest of public offices.

Husband Shoots Man He Accuses Of Wrecking Home

Cordele, Ga., September 26.—(Special.)—Lawton Nipper, well-known young white farmer of this county, is lying at the point of death at his home eight miles east of Cordele on the Cordele and Deep Creek road as the result of a pistol wound at the hands of Will Clack, another young farmer of the same community. The shooting occurred at the country store of W. R. Blitch about sundown yesterday afternoon. The bullet penetrated Nipper's side, passing through the back and severing the spinal cord and lodging in the opposite side. Physicians state there is no chance for recovery.

Immediately following the shooting Clack came to Cordele and surrendered to Sheriff Noble and is now in the county jail awaiting the outcome of Nipper's wounds.

There were two eye-witnesses to the shooting, it is said, but neither seems to know how the shooting was done. Clack was said to have been in the store when Nipper entered and there were no words exchanged between the two men before Clack drew his revolver and shot once.

Cause of Shooting.

The cause of the shooting is said to have been a confession from Clack's wife to him that Nipper was the father of the infant child born in the home of the Clack's about 10 days ago. It is said that Clack denied being responsible for the child several months ago when it was discovered that a baby was to be born in the home and had tried to get the wife to tell who its father was but she refused to do so, claiming that Clack was it's father until two months ago when she is said by Clack to have confessed that Nipper was the father. When she confessed, according to Clack, she claimed that Nipper in some way took advantage of her during Clack's absence from home over her protest.

Since that time Clack has been brooding over the affair. He is said to have told his wife that he would go on and live with her until the child was born but after that time he would take their only child, a little girl 5 years old, and go away as he did not want to rear them together.

Relatives of Mrs. Clack living in Fitzgerald, came at noon yesterday preceding the shooting last night, and carried Mrs. Clack and the infant away. The little 5-year-old girl is at the home of Daniel Clack, at Hatley, the father of the man who did the shooting.

Meeting Accidental.

The meeting of the two men at the country store last night is said to have been accidental and was not planned.

The wounded man was indicted by the grand jury yesterday for assault and intent to murder but this is not believed to have had any connection whatever with the shooting last night. A man named Barfield was the prosecutor in the assault charge and the difficulty was said to have occurred this summer.

Both young farmers were prosperous and well-known in the county and the shooting has been almost the only topic of discussion since it became generally known.

When a man is fed up with his job you may be sure that the job is fed up with him.

FARM LOANS

Let us suggest that wide-awake farmers ought to know now as well as they will later whether they are going to need money this fall. If they are going to need it, they should apply now, because now we can give the business prompt attention and place the loans quickly. Later on we shall be overwhelmed with business and have to move more slowly. It is so every year.

We have a correspondent in nearly every county in the state. Write us for his name. We are well known to farmers, merchants, bankers and lawyers in every county in the state. We have fifteen millions of farm loans on our books now, which shows we can and do place loans for those who call on us.

SANITARY OFFICE DENIES HURTING CITY FIRE PLUGS

The city sanitary department is not to blame for the defective fire plugs that hampered Chief E. B. Cody and his fire fighters during the downtown conflagration Saturday night and Sunday morning, H. P. Mallory, superintendent of night street cleaning, declared Tuesday.

Superintendent Mallory's denial followed a statement made by Chief Cody that the sanitary department was responsible for defective plugs, two of which, he said, had been used by his department for more than ten years.

ANGIER-FORREST AVENUE EXTENSION RIGHTS SECURED

Right of way for practically all the distance has been secured for the proposed Angier-Forrets avenues extension, it was announced at a meeting of the Fourth Ward Improvement club Tuesday night at the Forrest Avenue school.

It is stated that the extensions proposed are meeting with great favor in both the fourth and ninth wards, and that the citizens of both wards are realizing that the completion of the Highland Avenue sewer, now nearing, will make available for development a large area which has remained undeveloped for so many years despite the fact that it is almost in the heart of the city.

Further plans for these extensions will be discussed by the Ninth Ward Improvement club at a meeting to be held Monday night.
